Gov. Lausche Hints Taft May Get His Senate Vote

Ohio Democrat Startles Parley Of Governors; McCarthy Scored

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 19.—Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) may get the vote of Ohio's Democratic Governor in his bid for another six-year term this fall. At least he hasn't lost it yet.

Gov. Frank J. Lausche caused something of a sensation here today when he said he had not made up his mind whether to vote for Taft or for Taft's Democratic rival in the senatorial race, Joseph T. (Jumping Joe) Ferguson.

Governor Lausche, who is attending the forty-second annual Governors' Conference at the Greenbrier, disclosed his on-the-fence attitude at a news conference sandwiched in between round-table talks on reorganization of State governments and water power development.

War Held Not Inevitable

Paul G. Hoffman, head of the Economic Cooperation Administration, addressed the Governors tonight at a state dinner and deplored the growing acceptance among Americans that a World War III is "inevitable." He said this kind of talk was playing right into the hands of Moscow. Actually, he said, our goal is to prevent World War III ever happening.

"You remember," said Hoffman, "that Moscow took proprietorship of the word 'democracy.' She stole that one. Now Moscow is trying to steal the word 'peace.' The Communists are trying to get us to talk war while they talk peace. One of the greatest so-called 'peace offensives' in history is now going on all over Europe.

"We are always painted as warmongers. So any time any one of us makes the statement, 'We have got to do this or that to win World War III,' he is just furnishing grist for the Communist mill. Such statements give them exactly what they want and put us right where they want us.

Trap Can Be Avoided

"We don't belong there. The way is open to us to avoid that very dangerous trap and that is to recognize that our goal should not be to win World War III. Our goal should be to prevent World War III ever happening."

Hoffman, who built up the Studebaker automobile firm, gave an example of how war thinking has taken hold of American minds. He said there was a great burst of new interest in automobiles on the West Coast recently.

"We discovered that at the bottom of it all was a rumor that the Cadillac plant had been converted to the building of tanks," Hoffman said. "Now I find there is a similar boom all over the country, and that when inquiry is made of would-be purchasers, they often explain they figured to play it

Byrd Pledged 55 Anti-Hutchinson Votes, Is Report

By The Associated Press

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) was reported yesterday to have received pledges from 55 of the 96 Senators that they will oppose the nomination of Martin A. Hutchinson to be a Federal Trade Comsioner.

Byrd refused comment, but one of the Virginia Senator's friends said:

"We've got pledges from 55 Senators—and I don't believe the other side can produce more than 25 votes for Hutchinson."

Post Ad Sells 10 Household Items in One Day

Mrs. R. H. of McKinley st. nw. placed an ad in The Washington Post offering for sale ten household items ranging from a bed to a fireless cooker. After the ad had appeared for one day, Mrs. H. called The Post to cancel her ad. She reported that she had sold everything listed in the ad and was "pleased" with the results.

You'll be pleased, too, when you see how quickly and easily a Post want ad will find buyers for the items you wish to sell. If there's a phone listed in your name, you can call in your Post want ad and have it charged. Dial NA. 4200 today.

Two Killed, 36 Hurt as Picnic Truck Plunges Down 35-Foot Embankment in Maryland

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Rescue workers and students aid the injured after truck (upper left) plunged 35 feet

Cumberland, Md., June 19 (AP).—A big open-body truck with forty high school picnickers aboard spun out of control down a 35-ft. embankment today and killed two of the youngsters.

Two other children and a mother, along as a chaperone, are on the critical list. Another 33 were injured less seriously. All children were tenth graders at Central High School in Lonaconing, 18 miles west of Cumberland.

"The brakes didn't hold and I couldn't seem to get it straightened out," said Francis R. Mills, 26-year-old driver.

State Trooper Jack Browning said Mills had no driver's license. Mills is in a hospital for X-rays of a head injury.

Those killed were Jean McFarland and Raymond Meyers, both 15 and from Lonaconing.

In critical condition were Stanley Owens, 15, of Keyser, W. Va., Charlotte Hadley, 15, and Mrs. James Cameron, 35, both of Lonaconing, in the far-west corner of Maryland.

Mills was driving the first of two truckloads of picnickers. The truck skidded, broke through a guard rail, and turned over down the embankment, crushing many of the children.

Mrs. Cameron, accompanying her two children, administered first aid to the sobbing youngsters for a few minutes and collapsed.

Arms Aid Bill Approved by Committees

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Two Senate committees yesterday gave formal approval to legislation authorizing the second-year $1,222,500,000 arms aid program to nations opposing communism.

Action came after the two committees—Foreign Relations and Armed Services—defeated a move to require some European recovery funds to be spent for military purposes.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations group said the vote was 12 to 0, with Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) voting "present." Under a special arrangement, Connally said, the record will be left open to permit absentee Senators to register their stand on the bill.

There was no move to cut the total and the measure generally conforms to State and Defense Department desires. However, the committees rewrote sections to limit President Truman's powers in allocating the funds.

Other Defense Developments

Meanwhile, there were these other developments affecting defense bills on Capitol Hill:

(1) On the request of several Senators, Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas postponed calling up the draft extension bill until Wednesday, despite pleas of Pentagon chiefs to rush the measure through before the present law expires Saturday. This makes final action by then very unlikely and may mean that millions of young men now on the rolls must be reregistered.

(2) A Senate Armed Services Subcommittee approved a 350-million-dollar naval shipbuilding authorization bill—which calls for construction of an atom-powered submarine, other radically new submersibles and conversion of a cruiser to a guided missile warship.

3. The House gave final legislative approval to a bill continuing the Government in the synthetic rubber business and sent it to the White House. The measure would extend the present law—which expires June 30—for another two years. Earlier the House had voted for a three-year extender, but the Senate cut it to two years. The legislation keeps the synthetic rubber plants built during the war in an operating or standby condition.

Split-up of Arms Aid

The arms assistance bill would authorize the grant of an additional one billion dollars in new weapons for America's partners under the North Atlantic Pact.

Greece, Turkey and Iran would get another $131,500,000; 16 million dollars would go to Korea and the Philippines; and 75 million dollars could be spent, in arming nations in the general area of China.

Neither the Senate nor the House has yet acted on the measure, and after its passage actual appropriations must be voted for the program.

Senator Connally said the two committees had voted down an amendment of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) that would force European countries to spend about 100 million dollars in so-called ECA "counterpart funds" for rearming. His amendment would have required the European powers to use that part of the counterpart funds—local currencies put up to match Marshall Plan dollars—which is earmarked

House Front Wrecked By Transit Co. Vehicle

One man was killed and five persons were injured, two seriously, in a three-way collision between a Capital Transit bus and two automobiles at 20th and K sts. nw early this morning.

The bus, an L-4, running south on 20th st. to the Federal Triangle, hit the rear end of an Oldsmobile going into K st. from the right, west, according to witnesses.

The car was hurled across the street, striking a Buick, going north on 20th st., driven by Heston Simon, of 260 R st. ne, who was thrown out and killed. His wife, Catherine, riding with him, was hurt.

The bus crashed into a row house at 925 20th st. The front of the structure was torn out. All three vehicles were piled together on the east sidewalk.

The injured, all of whom were taken to Emergency Hospital, were: Catherine Simon, 28, lacerations, possible fractured left wrist, also suffering from shock.

George Griffith, 45, of 640 5th st. ne., passenger on the bus, possible fractured back, condition serious.

Catherine Moore, 52, of 12 Rosecrest ave. Alexandria; lacerations of arm and forehead, not serious.

Joseph Criscone, 49, 66 New York ave. nw., bruises, lacerations, not serious.

Eric Larson, 24, 1100 12th st. nw., minor bruises, not serious.

The accident was described by a witness, Hooker Doolittle, 61, a State Department employe, of the University Club. He said he was sitting in the third seat when the bus ran into the Oldsmobile. He was thrown to the floor. He said the bus was going between 30 and 35 miles an hour.

Another passenger, George Griffith, in Emergency Hospital, reported he was doing a crossword puzzle when there was a crash and he landed on his head. He saw no details of the accident.

Other observers said the bus hurtled more than 125 feet from the K st. intersection, and turned completely around on the east side of 20th st. after wrecking the house front.

The Buick, driven by Simon, who was killed, was a convertible.

The driver of the bus gave his name as J. M. Simcik, 21.

433 Million Hike Hits Firms With Income Over $167,000 a Year

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

An increase of 433 million dollars in income taxes of big corporations was approved yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee in a 10th-inning bid for a "veto-proof" tax bill.

The tax boost lifted revenue in the big bill to within 12 million dollars of the amount needed to offset previous losses from excise-tax cuts.

A completely new corporate tax plan was devised by the committee to attain the "balance" asked by the President. It imposed a 21 percent "normal tax" on all corporate earnings, plus a 20 percent "surtax" on income in excess of $25,000.

Actually, it hit only corporations earning more than $167,000 a year. Small companies making up to $5000 would be taxed as at present. Firms earning between $5000 and $167,000 would receive a tax cut under the plan.

Treasury Plan Sidetracked

The committee move sidetracked a Treasury plan designed to raise 675 million dollars by imposing a 42-percent tax on all corporate incomes in excess of $25,000. The Treasury plan would have resulted in moderate reductions for companies earning between $25,000 and $100,000.

Present taxes range from 21 to 25 percent on small firms netting up to $25,000 a year, but jump to an average of 53 percent in the so-called "notch" brackets between $25,000 and $50,000. All corporate earnings in excess of $50,000 now are taxed at 38 percent.

The compromise system of normal and surtax rates was worked out by the committee's staff expert, Colin F. Stam. A preponderant majority of Ways and Means Democrats have been agreed on it for days, but kept their secret closely guarded after a recent huddle with Speaker Sam Rayburn.

Doughton Votes With GOP

Fourteen of the committee's 15 Democrats reportedly voted for the compromise, with Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.), joining the committee's 10 Republicans in opposition.

The corporate tax action followed a committee vote dramatically reversing, 13 to 12, an earlier decision to cut taxes on so-called "economy-brand" cigarettes, retailing at not more than 12 cents a pack.

Under the earlier decision, higher priced "standard brands" would have been taxed as at present at 7 cents a pack, but the tax on cheaper cigarettes would have been cut back to 4.9 cents.

'Senate Not a Grand Jury'

Barkley Hits Action of GOP Group for New Amerasia Probe

By the United Press

Vice President Alben W. Barkley reluctantly opened the door to a possible second Senate investigation of the stormy Amerasia case yesterday, but publicly berated the 21 Republicans who proposed it.

In an unusual action, Barkley questioned indirectly whether politics might not lie behind the GOP demand. He also voiced grave doubt over the "wisdom" of using the Senate as a "grand jury" to investigate public officials.

But he said that since his personal opinions have no bearing on the case, he was referring the Republican resolution to the Senate Judiciary Committee, which now must decide whether to conduct the inquiry.

While the full Judiciary Committee must decide whether to go ahead with the new investigation, Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), said in a letter written May 17 that he wanted no part of a separate inquiry.

McCarran, who frequently disagrees violently with the Administration on security matters, wrote the letter to Senator Homer E. Ferguson (R., Mich.), who put it in the Congressional Record last week. There was no indication whether McCarran has changed his mind since he wrote the letter, but there was a strong chance he would go along with the traditional Senate practice of making an in-

On 60 Counts

Guilty Plea Is Entered By Erickson

New York, June 19 (AP).—Gambler Frank Erickson, an old hand at figuring the odds, today played a long shot that could bring him some degree of leniency, or a 60-year prison sentence.

Rather than stake his chances on a courtroom trial, Erickson pleaded guilty to 59 counts of bookmaking and one of conspiracy.

The paunchy, 54-year-old gambler, kingpin in a coast-to-coast, $12,500,000-a-year bet-booking business, stood tensely beside the defense table in Special Sessions Court as Judge Nathan B. Perlman asked:

"Does the defendant plead guilty to each of the 60 counts"

"Yes," Erickson said firmly.

District Attorney Frank Hogan said the evidence against Erickson was "so overwhelming" that a guilty plea was his only alternative.

The plea, Hogan said, spells the end "for all time to come" of the gambling activity of a man he called the "the biggest and most notorious bookmaker in the United States."

Erickson, a mild-mannered, balding little man who has never spent a day in jail in his life, was ordered back into court next Monday for sentencing. He was continued in $10,000 bail until then.

Hogan said he would ask the stiffest sentence possible.

The gambler could get a maximum of a year in jail and a $500 fine on each of the 60 counts, or a total of 60 years and $30,000 in fines.

The New York Herald Tribune said it was believed that because he saved the State the expense of a trial Erickson will receive some consideration and his prison term

U. S. Accepts Ransom Terms For Vogeler

Vienna, June 19 (U.P.).—The United States Government has agreed tentatively to the "ransom" Communist Hungary is demanding for the release of Robert A. Vogeler, reliable reports said today.

Vogeler, assistant vice president of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., may be freed this week, London reports said.

The price demanded by Hungary for Vogeler's release from prison was said to be:

1. Release of war reparations Hungary has asked from Germany and the German-held Hungarian crown jewels, including the historic crown of St. Stephen.

2. Permission to reopen Hungarian consulates in New York and Cleveland, closed in January.

3. Lifting of the State Department's ban on American travel in Hungary, imposed in December. The last two were ordered after Vogeler's arrest.

Vogeler, 38, was arrested November 18, 1949, by Hungary's secret police and charged with sabotage and espionage for the United States. He was tried in February, convicted and sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Vogeler's British associate in I. T. & T., Edgar Sanders, tried on the same charges, was sentenced to 13 years.

"We hope to spring Vogeler," Walter Dowling, United States Deputy Minister to Austria, said, "but these published reports are not helpful, either to the State Department or to Vogeler."

The reports followed a confidential press conference here Saturday in which M. J. A. Cheetham, British Charge d'Affaires, was said to have told British reporters that Vogeler and Sanders may be freed soon.

Woman's Kidney Replaced by One From Dead Donor

Chicago, June 19 (U.P.).—Doctors were revealed today to have succeeded in replacing a woman's diseased kidney with a healthy one taken from a dead woman.

The transplanting was called the first of its kind in medical history, although it has been performed on animals.

Mrs. Howard Tucker, 49, agreed to gamble on the operation after being told she was suffering from a polycystic growth of the kidney and that her case was hopeless.

For five weeks she waited while physicians searched for a suitable donor, finally finding a woman who would donate one of her kidneys at her death.

On Saturday the donor died and two teams of surgeons went into action at the little Company of Mary Hospital. Within 45 minutes of the donor's death, the operation had been completed.

Sesqui Theater Not Ready; Drama May Open at Armory

Sesquicentennial Commission showmen are having their ups and downs these days.

The first public peek at Paul Green's "Faith of Our Fathers" drama, it was learned last night, may be at the National Guard Armory July 12, instead of at the especially built ampitheater in Rock Creek Park.

Paul Massmann, Sesqui general manager, now says the outdoor theater will not be completed until July 24 at the earliest. The opening originally was set for June 15.

Massmann has signed up the Armory to accommodate some 2000 Indian visitors who are coming here for their State honor day—on July 12 and are counting on seeing the Paul Green show.

"I plan to ask Green to stage a few select scenes or perhaps a dress rehearsal for the Hoosiers at the Armory on the 12th," Massmann said last night. "We still will have the grand premiere in Rock Creek Park."

While the drama may face an uncertain opening, up to $10,000 worth of commission backing has assured a better-than-ever Fourth

Pike Still Acting Head

4 AEC Members Renominated; Chairmanship Remains Vacant

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday sent to the Senate for confirmation the renominations of the four present members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Returning to the procedure set in the basic law, Mr. Truman named the commissioners to staggered terms. The present terms of the commissioners all expire on June 30.

Sumner Pike, Maine Republican and acting chairman, was listed for a four-year term. Gordon Dean of California was named for three years; Thomas E. Murray, new member from New York, for two, and Henry D. Smyth, the scientist member, for one year.

This leaves vacant a five-year term, presumably for the chairman when Mr. Truman selects him. So far, he has not made his choice of a successor to David E. Lilienthal, who resigned in February.

There were press reports the Chief Executive might name either Dean or Murray to the post. Such action was discounted by a highly placed source. He said he thought that if the President did not find a "big name" private citizen for the job, he might decide to boost Pike from his acting role to the actual, legal head of the agency.

Meantime, it was indicated yesterday that the AEC will soon send to Congress its request for new authorizations, to expand the hydrogen bomb development program.

The proposal for new spending authority, first mentioned last week by The Washington Post, contemplates an amount of roughly 300 million dollars, a high official indicated.

U. S. Scientists Assail Joliot-Curie A-Ban Plan

The authoritative journal of American atomic scientists yesterday lit into a proposal for international atomic agreement made by Prof. Frederic Joliot-Curie.

House Approves Murray Bill To Revamp Efficiency Rating

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The House yesterday unanimously approved the Murray bill to revamp the efficiency rating system for most of the Government's classified and per-diem employes.

The bill, sent to the Senate, calls for a "job-performance rating plan" to replace the present efficiency rating system. The present ratings of excellent, very good, good, fair, and unsatisfactory would be replaced by three ratings of excellent, satisfactory and unsatisfactory.

No employe would be given an unsatisfactory rating, however, unless he was given a 90-day warning by his supervisor and a reasonable opportunity to improve his work.

An employe rated either unsatisfactory or satisfactory would be given an opportunity to appeal for a higher rating. The first appeal would be to his agency appeal board, and the final appeal would be to an impartial board operated under the direction of the Civil Service Commission. In general, the appeal procedure would be the same as it is now. Civil Service is opposed to employe appeals to it.

Any employe rated satisfactory or better would automatically be eligible for either an in-grade or longevity promotion. His service and conduct wouldn't have to be certified by his supervisor as satisfactory to get an increase if he were otherwise eligible. The Civil Service Commission would be given general authority to inspect agency operation of the plans. Each agency would be required to have a rating plan. Civil Service wanted it optional with the respective agencies.

The only amendment approved by the House would add the Atomic Energy Commission to the agencies exempt from the measure. Others would be: Tennessee Valley, postal field em-

Woman Is Winner In Maine Race For House Nomination

Portland, Me., June 19 (AP).—Maine's Democratic national committeewoman Lucia M. Cormier, 38, won the First District congressional nomination in the State's primaries today. She defeated Dr. Adrian H. Scolten, 57, of Portland.

With the votes from 125 of the district's 154 precincts unofficially tabulated, Miss Cormier had 3503 to Scolten's 1350.

She will oppose Representative Robert Hale (R.) in the September 11 general election. Hale won renomination to a fifth term over Ray W. Stetson. Both are Portlanders.

In the Second Congressional District, John J. Maloney, jr., of Lewistown appeared to have defeated John P. Fortunato and Antonio M. Chiaravalloti.

President Truman, whom the Fine Arts Commission irked when it opposed his adding a balcony to the White House, yesterday named four new members to the Commission.

Their terms expired, Gilmore D. Clarke, New York landscape architect and commission chairman; William T. Aldrich, Boston architect; L. Andrew Reinhard, New York architect, and Lee Lawrie, sculptor, of Easton, Md., were dropped.

Succeeding them for four-year terms dating from yesterday are:

Felix G. W. de Weldon of 2500 Q st. nw., Vienna-born sculptor who became an American citizen, and whose work includes the bronze inaugural bust of the President and the "Iwo Jima flag-raising" monument on which he is working now.

Son Sees Mother Drown as Father Fails in Rescue

A 25-year-old Fairfax County mother drowned in a fish pond last night while her husband groped futilely for her body.

Sergt. John Wahl, of the Fairfax County police, identified the woman as Mrs. Viola Bardella of Route 1, Fairfax, Va. Her husband, William A. Bardella, is a Capital Transit streetcar operator.

Death broke up the family's gay swimming party on the Fairfax farm of B. M. Kielsgard while Bardella was pushing a plank on which his wife was floating.

Bardella told police his wife slipped off the plank 25 feet from shore. He grasped at her, pulled her cap off as she went down.

Mrs. Bardella knew how to swim, her husband said, but she did not regain the surface. Repeated dives were unavailing.

Their 10-year-old son, James, ran a mile to the Kielsgard farmhouse where the Alexandria Rescue Squad was summoned.

At 10 p. m., two and a half hours after she fell in, Mrs. Bardella's limp body was recovered.

Kielsgard told police the pond is 14 feet at its deepest point.

He did not know the Bardellas were swimming in it, he said.

Senate Group's Coffee Action Draws Latin America Protest

Fourteen coffee-growing Latin American countries fired a blistering protest yesterday against proposals of a Senate subcommittee that the Justice Department police the coffee industry.

The protest, delivered to Secretary of State Dean Acheson, by 12 ambassadors and two charge d'affaires, called the committee's proposals "economic warfare." Unless the committee's recommendations are "offset officially," they added, they will "create misunderstandings between the nations of the Western Hemisphere and interfere with the Good Neighbor policy."

Ambassadors who signed the heated protest were those of Nicaragua, the Dominican Republic, Peru, Colombia, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Brazil, Honduras, and Guatemala. Charges d'affaires for Ecuador and Haiti also signed. The delegation delivering the protest also included representatives from Cuba, Venezuela and Mexico.

The target of the protest was a report by a Senate Agriculture subcommittee headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa). It charged that speculators, chiefly South Americans, had made a "killing" at the expense of Ameri-

Bill to Set Up U. S. Health Dept. Argued

Proponents and opponents of President Truman's plan to establish a separate Department of Health, Education and Security testified in a day-long session yesterday before the House Committee on Executive Expenditures.

Lined up for the measure were witnesses representing the Bureau of the Budget, the Association of Schools of Public Health, the American Association of Social Workers, the American Federation of Labor, the National Child Labor Committee, the American Parents Committee, and the Cooperative League of America.

Opposing it were witnesses from the American Medical Association, the American Dental Association and the American Association of University Women.

Rep. Hoffman Disapproves

The committee, headed by Chairman William L. Dawson (D., Ill.), has before it a resolution of disapproval of the plan—Reorganization Plan 27—submitted by Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.).

The group also opened testimony on Reorganiaztion Plan 24, which would transfer the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Department of Commerce. A resolution of disapproval of this plan also has been introduced.

The committee must act within 10 days on the disapproval resolutions, although Congress has until the end of July to act on the President's proposals. These automatically become law unless turned down by a majority of either House by that date.

Harding Backed It

Charles B. Staffacher, executive assistant director of the budget, reminded the committee that creation of a separate department to include the function of health, education and social security was first recommended by President Harding nearly 30 years ago.

"Almost every comprehensive plan for the reorganization of the executive branch which has been developed since that time has provided for such a department," he said.

Dr. Louis H. Bauer, chairman of the board of trustees of the American Medical Association, expressed concern that creation of the department would "accelerate" the move toward socialized medicine.

Dr. E. Harold Gale of the dental association said health functions should be separate from education and welfare.

Harvard Man Backs Plan

Dr. Hugh R. Leavell, professor of public health practice, Harvard School of Public Health, and chairman of the executive board, American Public Health Association, testified on behalf of the plan. His organization, he said, is a professional society of more than 12,000 public health workers, including physicians, dentists, nurses, engineers and other professional groups in the health field.

"It seems appropriate to us that the agency dealing with health, education and security at the Federal level should be thoroughly coordinated at the top because corresponding agencies at the local and State level are so generally separate and distinct. A first-rate example of coordination in the proposed Federal department would be useful."

Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer, who was unable to accept the committee invitation to testify, sent a statement in support of the proposed department.

"In order to fight the cold war successfully, our country must fortify our social ramparts," she said. "To achieve this, the Nation needs leadership and orderly administration in the fields of health education and social security. The numerous and uncoordinated grants-in-aid which the Congress has voted year after year in the various fields of human welfare must be critically reviewed to bring about greater economy and more effective service to the people as a whole. This will be possible only if the Federal Security Administrator has the prestige of Cabinet rank."

All Objections Met

Mrs. Meyer noted that Reorganization Plan 27 is almost identical with the original Taft-Fulbright bill and said it meets all the "objections of the medical men and educators who opposed last year's proposal on the ground that health and education were subordinated to welfare."

Mrs. Jack B. Fahy, executive director of the American Parents Committee, herself the mother of a 4-year-old son, urged adoption of the plan in the interest of economy, efficiency and the 46 million "voiceless" children of America.

Final witness of the day was W. E. Willett, a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who urged the transfer of RFC to the Department of Commerce. Attention was called to the fact that until the outburst of the Jesse Jones-Henry Wallace feud RFC was under Commerce.

Blow at Program

Meanwhile the House Commerce Committee struck a blow at the Administration's national health program yesterday by voting to pigeonhole a Senate-passed bill that would have authorized Federal aid for medical education.

Chairman Percy Priest (D., Tenn.) of the special health subcommittee said the vote was due to "growing opposition" to any bills calling for more Federal spending. He said he expected the committee would approve another Senate-passed measure, which gives assistance to States in providing full county health units where such units are lacking.

The surprise defeat of the Administration medical education measure came on motion by Representative John B. Bennett (R., Mich.). The measure, part of President Truman's Fair Deal program, would have authorized funds for medical construction and for student tuition in various fields. It called for about $47 million in the first year.

The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee at the same time shelved for this session of Congress a bill to set up a research program for crippling diseases such as rheumatism, arthritis, multiple sclerosis and polio. Some members said they thought it was too late in the session to hope for final action.

Thirty-five students are making the trip

European Teen-Agers Here on Tour

Thirty-five vivacious European teen-agers rolled into Washington yesterday on the first lap of a 24-day 5200-mile tour of the United States.

The boys and girls, hailing from nine different European countries, have spent the winter attending American prep schools on scholarships given by the American Field Service. Greyhound Bus Lines is providing a bus on which the students will tour the country.

Their first stop in Washington was the International Bank, where they heard Robert L. Garner, vice president, describe its workings. Before the talk, a few of them had time to exchange their impressions of the United States.

Pearley Blanc, 16, of Paris declared enthusiastically that "I have never had such a wonderful year in my life."

Both she and 17-year-old Pierre Calcat, also of Paris, agreed that the Americans they had met during their visit had been very hospitable.

Boys and girls in the United States are given more responsibility than are the young people in Europe, Pearley said. But the Americans' "like very much to have fun" and throw themselves into having a good time, she added.

Pierre, who had visited Washington during one of his vacations from Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., admired Washington's monuments, and Pearley reminded him with pride that the city was designed by a Frenchman, Pierre L'Enfant.

Joske Krause, 19, of the Netherlands, thinks American teen-agers are a great deal less serious than the boys and girls she knew at home. There is "more going out, having parties and taking life easy" here, she said.

Joske explained that she didn't know quite what to expect when she came to the United States. "In Europe," she said, "they say Americans are awfully materialistic, and I still think they are.

Niels Lassen of Copenhagen, valued the year because it cleared up many of his misunderstandings of America. In Denmark, he said, the impressions of America come from the movies and best sellers. As a result, the Danes think of Americans in terms of the Wild West and gangsters," a "rough life" during which they "live hard and die young."

After a tour of the city today and visits to the House and Senate, the students will leave Wednesday for Pittsburgh.

Jane Cowl, Actress, Is Seriously Ill

Santa Monica, Calif., June 19 (AP). Jane Cowl, one of the most beautiful and famous actresses of the American stage a generation ago, is seriously ill, it was disclosed here.

Now 65, Miss Cowl entered a hospital 10 days ago and underwent surgery for a chronic abdominal ailment.

Farm Seen Needing More Skill Than Any Other U. S. Industry

Modern farming requires more skill than any other industry, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Knox T. Hutchinson told the American Association of Agricultural Engineers yesterday.

"The successful American farmer nowadays has to be an engineer," he added, "as well as something of an entomologist, plant expert, veterinarian, soil specialist or whatever the occasion demands. He must know a lot of practical things about construction, drainage, soil dynamics and machines. A farmer must know how to take a machine apart and put it together and make it work."

Hutchinson warned, however, that "if farmers are to continue mechanizing their operations at a healthy pace, they must have adequate returns.

"When prices fall too low," he said, "farmers, like other businessmen, can't afford improvements. Many farmers recently have been getting uncomfortably close to that position."

The phenomonal improvement in farming in the Southeastern states, from Virginia to Mississippi, dominated all other discussions in yesterday's meetings of the association at the Statler Hotel.

The average Georgia farm worker is producing two and one-half times as much as he produced 25 years ago, John R. Carreker of the Southern Piedmont Conservation Experiment Station at Watkinsville, Ga., reported.

George B. Nutt, head of the Agricultural Engineering Department at Clemson College, declared that in the nine years from 1940 to 1949 the number of tractors in the area increased 325 percent. Machines are replacing hand labor in corn, small grains, soybeans and hay, he said, while improvements are being made in cotton and tobacco.

The South, Nutt said, has lagged behind other sections in mechanization. "First, there was an oversupply of cheap farm labor," he said. "Second, crops typical to the area, like cotton, tobacco, peanuts and sweet potatoes, were difficult to mechanize completely."

New machinery, he said, is producing as much cotton in 18 man-hours as was produced in 150 man-hours under the time-honored system of mule-drawn implements, hand-hoeing and harvesting."

Albert Weems of Meriden, Miss., called the Southeast "the last frontier for farm machinery manufacturers." Weems described a low-cost cotton picker, fitted for the land conditions in that area.

Nutt told of a farm implement company serving five Southeastern States that sold 60 million dollars worth of equipment in 17 months, as compared with only one million dollars worth in 1938. A dealer serving two States sold 12 million dollars worth last year as compared with 2½ million in 1938.

The horse and mule population of Georgia has decreased steadily, Carreker said, until this year there is one tractor to every five farms in that State.

"Great strides have been made in conservation practices," he said. "In 1930 Georgia grew only 87,500 acres of winter legumes, as compared with 910,150 in 1948. Improved permanent pasture now totals 2,400,000 acres, aproximately one million acres above 1924.

"Peanut yields have increased 18 percent, and tobacco 46 percent."

3 Generations to Wed In Triple Ceremony

Los Angeles, June 19 (AP).—If the preacher has trouble keeping things straight at a triple wedding Saturday it shouldn't be surprising. The brides will be a grandmother, mother and daughter.

They will stand up this way: Mrs. May Forgy, 64, and Jess Taylor, 70; Mrs. Forgy's daughter, Mrs. Merle Kelly Thomas, 34, and Spencer Ramsdale, 29, and Mrs. Thomas' daughter, Miss Darlene Kelly, 16, and Ralph Lester, 18.

Higher Wage Base for Security Tax Asked

By The Associated Press

Two Senators, a Republican and a Democrat, yesterday joined in a move to increase the amount of workers' annual earnings on which social security taxes are collected.

Senators H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) and Murray (D., Mont.) argued that the present wage base of $3000 does not allow higher-paid workers to earn corresponding retirement benefits.

Social security taxes are now levied only on the first $3000 of a worker's annual earnings, no matter how high they go. The House has passed a bill that would broaden coverage and raise the base to $3600.

The Senate Finance Committeee approved a similar bill, but made no change in the $3000 figure. That measure is now before the Senate. It would add an estimated 10 million persons to the 35 million now covered. Voting on amendments is scheduled to begin at 4 p. m. today.

13 Seek $4200 Base

Thirteen Democratic Senators, headed by the majority floor leader, Senator Lucas of Illinois, have offered an amendment to boost the wage base to $4200 a year. Since such a hike would bring in more taxes, it would also increase benefits to higher-salaried workers.

Smith said an increase to $4200 "would allow reasonable differentials in benefits and thus give sufficient recognition to the higher-paid worker for his greater contribution to the economy and to the Social Security program."

He said retention of the $3000 base would mean that "almost half of the regularly employed male workers would receive practically the same benefit."

Murray Prefers $4800 Base

Murray said the base should be boosted at least to $4200 and preferably to $4800. He said the bill the Senate is debating would authorize benefits up to $80 a month on a $4200 base and up to $100 a month on a $4800 base.

Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Finance Committee has indicated he may go along with the Lucas amendment if the floor leader and other Democrats do not press for other changes.

Murray also offered an amendment to include disability insurance in the Social Security program. He said few private insurance companies now issue such insurance.

Senator Long (D., La.) also advocated extending aid to States for disabled persons under 65. He called this a "crying need" and a "blind spot" in the present Social Security system.

Long said a needy person now over 65 is covered, yet a man under 65 but unable to work because of disability is left on the street corner to sell pencils.

6 Nations Open Talks On Pool Plan Today

Educators Offer Help To Point 4

New York, June 19 (AP).—A group of the Nation's top educators, including Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as president of Columbia University, today declared President Truman's "Point Four" program is indispensable in the world struggle against communism.

But at the same time they said that applying the program of aid to underprivileged peoples will be a delicate business, and they put forward 11 suggestions for avoiding failure.

The group is the Educational Policies Commission, an agency of the National Education Association and the American Association of School Administrators. Among others on the commission is James B. Conant, president of Harvard.

The commission said:

"Aside from the organization of the peoples of the free world and the development of their economic and military strength, the first element in such a strategy should be the removal of the conditions on which communism and other forms of totalitarianism feed."

These, it added, are "oppression and discrimination, hunger, disease, ignorance, misery and despair.

"This calls for bold, imaginative and generous measures—measures that break radically with traditional policies governing the relations between the strong and the weak, the rich and the poor, between the technically advanced and technically backward peoples," the group said.

The "Point Four" program took its name from a policy speech by President Truman January 20, 1949. In his fourth point, he called for aid to underdeveloped areas. A congressional bill embodying this plan became law June 5, with an appropriation of $35 million as a starter.

The commission gave its position in 11 points, briefly as follows:

1. The purpose of the program should be to assist the people of each participating country to improve their conditions—without any kind of American imperialism.

2. The educational program should be as bold, new and imaginative as the program of technical assistance. This means changing attitudes toward both man and nature—including the touchy matter of birth rates.

3. The educational program should articulate closely with the traditions, the life conditions, and the institutions of the peoples involved. This means that American leadership at the outset should give way rapidly as local leaders emerge.

4. The educational program should be broadly conceived.

5. The educational program should embrace nonschool as well as school agencies.

6. All Americans in the program should be specially prepared for their jobs to avoid cultural friction.

7. America's diverse racial and national stocks should be used to the full, including Negroes, both to ease contacts with peoples of other races and to refute Communist propaganda.

8. Many specialists from the participating countries should be trained in the United States or other advanced nations.

9. Young students from countries to be helped should be assigned to study the problems that industrial civilization brings.

10. The advisory board authorized by Congress should include experienced personnel.

11. The American people should be prepared for a long and sustained effort.

Paris, June 19 (AP).—A fully detailed outline of France's plan to pool the coal and steel of six nations for their common good in peace or war will be presented to her participating neighbors Tuesday.

The plan, advanced by French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman on May 9—now complete to the last comma—will go before the opening session of the cooperating nations. All have agreed in advance on the objective, "A common action of peace, European solidarity and social and economic progress."

Britain, which declined to come into the conference, will be kept informed of the weeks-long deliberations on how to adapt the plan to the needs and wishes of the 150 million people of the sixth countries.

The simple aim of the conference is to abolish national frontiers in two basic European industries and merge total annual output of some 210 million tons of coal and 26 million tons of steel for the benefit of western Europe.

Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Italy and West Germany have agreed to participate.

Schuman Plan Indorsed By 118 U. S. Leaders

New York, June 19 (AP).—One hundred and eighteen American leaders—including two former Secretaries of State—today indorsed the Schuman plan to pool Franco-German coal and steel production.

Signers of the indorsement included former Secretaries of State Henry L. Stimson and George C. Marshall. Gen Lucius D. Clay, former American Military Governor of Germany, also signed.

The American Committee on United Europe obtained their signatures on the indorsement.

Reds Announce Plans To Sabotage Pooling

Berlin, June 19 (NYHT).—Communist labor leaders of France and East Germany, after a two-day conference here, today announced a joint decision to sabotage the Schuman plan to integrate the heavy industries of West Germany, France and other European countries.

They attacked the plan as an attempt by American imperialists to strengthen their rule over the economy and the policies of the countries. They declared its aim to be "the creation of a gigantic arsenal in preparation for war against the Soviet Union."

Parole Hearing Set For May Next Month

Former Representative Andrew J. May (D., Ky.), jailed for accepting wartime bribes from munitions makers Henry and Murray Garsson, will be given a parole hearing next month, it was revealed yesterday.

While he is not eligible for release until August 4, Parole Board Chairman George G. Killinger will interview him in July while on other business at the Ashland, Ky., Reformatory where May is confined.

U. S. Military Chiefs in Tokyo

MacArthur Outlines Security Formula

By Marguerite Higgins

Tokyo, June 19 (NYHT).—Douglas MacArthur today presented to America's top defense chiefs his formula for combining an early return of sovereignty to Japan with the security guaranties required here by the United States, it was authoritatively reported.

In a three-hour conference with Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, MacArthur also spoke his mind on measures he considers necessary to check communism in the Far East, officials here said.

As was expected, the general emphasized the importance to Far Eastern strategy of keeping Formosa from being taken over by Chinese Communists and thereby becoming a potential foothold for the Soviet Union. Formosa is a link between key American bases at Okinawa and in the Philippines.

Today's conference in MacArthur's office was preceded Sunday by intensive detailed briefings by MacArthur's intelligence and political division chiefs. So far as the general strategic picture is concerned, there were many depressing angles.

Despite the fact that America has poured more than 5 billion dollars into the Far East since the war's end, non-Communist influence has been on the retreat virtually everywhere except in Japan, South Korea and Indonesia.

Russian rearmament in northern Asia has been impressive. Intensive work has turned Soviet-held Dairen, Port Arthur and Vladivistok into first-class bases. Soviet air power outnumbers American in this area about 10 to one and special attention has been concentrated on submarines.

MacArthur feels there is no basic inconsistency between return of sovereignty to the Japanese and American security requirements because the Japanese, pledged to total disarmament, wish the Americans to remain here—after a treaty—as defenders.

The guiding viewpoint at supreme headquarters on bases can be boiled down to this:

The U. S. should keep in the Japanese chain of islands the minimum garrisons necessary to act as a deterrent to aggression from the Soviet Union and to fifth-column activity. Japan is not essential militarily to the United States in an inter-continental war. The United States has no wish to use these islands as a war base. But America has a stake in preventing Russia from using the islands against us.

To save Japan for the non-Communist world is just one more prop to America in keeping the world balance of power from tipping overwhelmingly in Russia's favor.

Soviet Votes Prohibition on Atomic War

Moscow, June 19 (U.P.).—The Supreme Soviet amid thunderous applause tonight unanimously approved a resolution to ban atomic warfare and brand the government that first resorts to it an aggressor.

The resolution was approved at a "world Congress of Peace Partisans" in Stockholm. Addressed to all world parliaments, a copy of it was presented to the Kremlin March 8 by a committee that included Americans O. John Rogge, Johannes Steel and Rockwell Kent.

The resolution urges cooperation of Parliaments to enact legislation banning atomic warfare.

Meeting in the Kremlin in joint session, the two houses of Parliament Council of Nationalities and Council of the Union—unanimously reelected Nikolai Shvernik as president of the Presidium. (The title corresponds to that of President of the Soviet Union.)

Sixteen vice presidents, representing the republics of the Soviet Union, were elected to the Supreme Soviet along with 15 ordinary members.

Dulles Tells Korea U. S. Aid Will Continue

Seoul, Korea, June 19 (U.P.).—John Foster Dulles, special adviser to the United States Secretary of State, assured Korea today of continued American support and predicted the Communists eventually would lose their grip on North Korea.

Dulles addressed the opening of the second freely elected National Assembly in South Korea's history. He arrived here Saturday on a three-day visit to confer with American and Korean officials.

He said Korea was conducting an experiment now that may go down in history as an example to the world—just like the great American experiment of the nineteenth century.

"As you establish here a wholesome society of steadily expanding well-being," he said, "you will set up a peaceful influence which will disintegrate the hold of Soviet communism on your fellows to the north and irresistibly draw them into unity with you.

"Never for a moment do we concede that the Soviet Communists will hold permanently their unwilling captives. No iron curtain can indefinitely block off the attracting force of what you do if you persist in the way you have been going."

President Syngman Rhee, addressing the same session, said South Korea would keep on fighting communism.

"We refuse to compromise with or make any concessions to the Communists," he said. "That would be the road leading toward disaster."

Dulles prepared to fly to Tokyo Tuesday for talks with Gen. Douglas MacArthur and other occupation leaders on the Far Eastern situation.

Labor Wins Tax Vote By Margin of 219

London, June 19 (AP).—Britain's Labor government, with a working majority of only eight in Commons, scored a whopping 219-vote victory today on a financial issue.

It was the biggest majority since the new Parliament was elected in February. The Laborites have won most previous ballots by votes of one to 14.

The issue this time was a Conservative amendment designed to prevent surtaxes. The final vote was 296 to 77.

Ruhr Defeat Is Blow to Reds

Frankfurt, June 19 (AP).—Ruhr election returns today punished the Communist Party with a crushing political defeat in its happiest hunting ground in West Germany.

Two Nationalist parties at the other extreme of the political range fared even worse.

At the same time, the polling of 36.9 percent of the votes by conservative Christian Democrats, more than any other party in Sunday's North Rhine-Westphalia state election, made meaningless the vote for socialization of industry.

In 1947, the industrial Ruhr piled up the highest percentage of Communist votes in Western Germany, 14 percent. Final returns from Sunday's poll from the state election office today showed the Communists had dropped to 5.5 percent. They failed to elect a single representative by direct vote, though they will have 12 seats in the State Legislature through proportional representation.

Two Soviet political blunders apparently played a major part in the Communist defeat: (1) the Russian announcement that all German prisoners of war have been returned, though Germans have first hand knowledge that thousands still remain in Russia, and (2) the Communist East German government's hurried settlement giving away German lands up to the Oder-Neisse line to Poland.

Many political commentators had viewed with alarm the noisy campaigning of two extreme nationalistic groups, the German Empire Party and the Socialist Empire Party. But they failed to win a single seat and together accounted for but 2 percent of the vote.

Red China Plans Drive to Combat Uuemployment

Hongkong, June 19 (U.P.).—Chinese Communist Premier Chou En-lai has asked local provincial governments to help combat increasing unemployment, it was disclosed today.

Chou issued a nation-wide directive telling management and workers to cooperate with local governments in setting up local relief funds.

The Premier said the government would distribute 235,000 tons of rice and wheat during the coming year.

Chou said the job situation was the most serious in the big cities of Shanghai, Nanking, Hankow, Chungking and Canton.

Cuban Reds Flooding U. S., McCarran Says

Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) asserted yesterday that Cuba has become a focal point for Communist operations in the Western Hemisphere and that Cuban Reds are flowing into this country "with practically no check."

The chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee said the traffic prompted the committee to vote a "continuing check" of the immigration system. Of the 15,000 Cubans who come to the United States monthly, he said, about 10 percent "fade into thin air."

He said Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) obtained that information during a recent on-the-spot check. It showed there are from 60,000 to 70,000 "known Communists" on the Caribbean Island, plus an undisclosed number unidentified.

McCarran also said Eastland's subcommittee will keep tabs on administration of the new displaced-persons law. The Nevadan has been one of the sharpest critics of the program on the ground that it opens the door to enemy agents and other subversives.

President Truman, in signing the bill last week, ordered the Displaced Persons Commission to take over the chore of screening refugees. The job has been handled by the International Refugee Organization.

The Cubans are permitted to enter the country without visas under a "tourist" agreement that permits Americans to remain in Cuba as long as six months without even a passport. The Cubans must have passports and their stay is limited to 29 days.

Without admitting or denying McCarran's charges, Acting Immigration Commissioner A. R. Mackey said a system is being worked out that would permit the Cubans to be checked before they leave the island.

If the proposed plan is approved by the State Department, he said, Immigration officials will have the final say on which Cubans should be allowed in. They would have to prove they are Cuban citizens before the passport requirement would be waived.

The Visa requirements for Cuban tourists was waived about three years ago to relieve the burden on the U. S. Consul at Havana. At the time, so many Cubans were coming to this country that the visa line at the consulate stretched several blocks.

New Amerasia Probe Asked

vestigation under the pretense of seeing if one is needed.

The case revolves about the theft of 1700 military and diplomatic papers in 1945. They later were found by the wartime Office of Strategic Services in the New York offices of Amerasia magazine, a now defunct publication on Far Eastern affairs.

Administration critics have charged the affair was "whitewashed" because only two persons were fined, Philip J. Jaffe, coeditor of the magazine, and Emmanuel Larsen, a former State Department employe and now a freelance writer here. Four others got off scot free.

The Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee headed by Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) already is looking into the case in connection with Red charges hurled against the State Department by Senator Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.). McCarthy, calls Amerasia the "key" to his accusations.

Barkley's rebuke topped these other developments:

1. The subcommittee announced it will question State Department Security Chief John E. Peurifoy behind closed doors Wednesday. He will be asked about McCarthy's charges that he tried to "tamper" with Larsen's Amerasia testimony. In a counter-blast, Peurifoy has accused McCarthy of trying to "intimidate" Larsen. McCarthy may be called later.

2. Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) demanded that the subcommittee call Patrick J. Hurley, former Ambassador to China, to furnish names involved in his charges that State Department officials "did steal and give or sell" top secret documents to Amerasia magazine. Hurley made his charges in New Mexico yesterday. Hickenlooper said "we ought to have the benefit of Hurley's testimony."

Hurley said John S. Service "and several associates both in and out of the foreign service in China" supplied General Mao Tse-tung with secret information in 1944 and "advised" Communist leaders of ways and means of defeating American policy in China.

Hurley said he was serving as Ambassador to China at the time with the specific assignment of upholding the Nationalist government, which was then led by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

"I know that State Department officials in China and in the State Department at Washington did sabotage the American policy in China."

3. Tydings hopes to make public soon FBI answers to a list of 12 subcommittee questions about the controversial five-year-old case. He said they concerned chiefly whether there was any espionage and why the accused got off so lightly.

4. Senator Hickenlooper demanded a new Federal grand jury investigation of the affair. He said a New York jury that made a "quickie" investigtion only only scratched the surface of the "most shocking" spy case in modern history.

5. Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said he still had not reached any decision on the New York jury's recommendation that the Justice Department made a full report on the case. Two Republican Senators, Karl E. Mundt (S. Dak.) and William F. Knowland (Calif.), demanded the report "without delay."

Barkley's acid statement caught the Senate by surprise and the members listened in hushed silence as soon as it was clear he was talking about the Republican resolution. It calls for a new investigation and formal action against any official found to have been derelict in his duty.

The Vice President noted that he had been sitting on the resolution since it was introduced last week. Then he observed:

"The chair has decided that it is not his function to consider the merits of the resolution itself. It may or may not be a reflection on the subcommittee now investigating the case. But the chair is not permitted to look into the motives of the Senators sponsoring the resolution.

He added that he always has questioned the wisdom of Senate investigations that are not aimed at writing new legislation. Even if the officials linked to the Amerasia case were found delinquent, he said, the House would have to begin impeachment proceedings.

"The Senate is not a grand jury," he said. "None of its committees are grand juries. The Senate cannot try anybody for any offense."

He said: However, that it was not for him to "question the wisdom or folly of having two investigations at the same time" and that he was referring the resolution to the Judiciary Committee.

Joliot-Curie Atom-Ban Plan Attacked by U. S. Scientists

tion and method while he did it.

In another Bulletin article, an American atomic weapons specialist dismissed as "propaganda" Russian claims that they have used atomic energy in large-scale engineering projects, for blasting.

The Bulletin, published monthly in Chicago and looked to as the definitive mouthpiece for America's most prominent atomic experts, opened its pages to an article by Joliot-Curie, recently fired because of his Communist views and activities from his job as head of France's atomic energy project.

The chief point of his article, "A Proposal Toward the Elimination of the Atomic Danger," was that the United States should agree at once to the absolute prohibition of atomic weapons.

All nations should agree to this, he said, and to two other points: the establishment of rigorous international control to assure this prohibition, and agreement that any violator be considered guilty of a crime against humanity.

The American proposal to the United Nations for international control—the so-called Acheson-Lilienthal-Baruch plan—wants inspection first, Joliot-Curie said. He believes, he added, that "it is fundamental, before establishing a system of investigation and inspections, to decide on the prohibition of the atomic bomb and the hydrogen bomb."

Sees War Risk Increased

The Nobel laureate said he saw the American plan "as increasing the risks of war rather than diminishing them."

The editor of the Bulletin, Dr. Eugene Rabinowitch, published an editorial response that, though polite, was sizzling.

Joliot-Curie, he said, was participating in a campaign deliberately designed to make the Soviet Union appear to be the champion of peace, while the United States was portrayed as a warmonger.

But the facts were, Rabinowitch continued, that Russia, not the United States, is blocking agreement. Two of the three proposed points—abolition of the atomic weapon and agreement that violation would be a crime against humanity, were agreed to; the third point, international investigation and inspection, was being refused by Russia.

Was it Joliot-Curie's position, and that of "his friends", Rabinowitch asked, that the U. N. should adopt the proposal without an "effective" control system.

Offers No Alternative

Instead of indorsing the Communist-inspired "Stockholm declaration", as he did, why did Joliot-Curie not sit down and work out an alternative to the U. N. plan for international inspection and control, the Bulletin editor demanded.

Rabinowitch concluded that Joliot-Curie may persuade "sympathetic writers, actors and movie stars in 'peace congresses'" that the principal obstacle to atomic control rests in the American Government's position. But he said, he cannot expect American scientists, who are informed of the facts of the U. N. negotiations, to believe such an idea. They know, he said, that the trouble has been "the Soviet Union's isolationism and distrust of the outside world."

In another article in the June Bulletin, an American atomic weapons expert pooh-poohed Russian claims of using atomic energy as an explosive to "move mountains and divert rivers from their beds."

Frederick Reines, of the Los Alamos Laboratory—the weapons experimentation part of the Atomic Energy Commission—declared that the use of atomic explosions for constructive engineering purposes appears "at best to be extremely limited in scope."

The principal difficulty, Reines said, is the residual radioactivity from any such explosion. If one wanted to use an atomic explosion for blasting purposes, he conceded, it could be done. But it would have to be used in such a fashion that a flowing river nearby could carry off the radioactive residue.

The explosion would have to be many miles from a populated region. There would also have to be excellent weather information, to make sure that a subsequent rainfall did not bring radioactive material down from the air, and poison the area where it fell. The area of the explosion would be so "hot" with radioactivity that no work could be done in the vicinity for at least several months after the explosion.

Finally, although an atomic explosion could move masses of earth large in terms of freight carloads, it would still be small in comparison with a mountain.

Seven Injured In Oklahoma Strike Clash

By the United Press

Seven men were injured in labor violence at a strikebound Oklahoma City steel plant yesterday, while negotiators strove to crack Pittsburgh's 117-day-old milk strike.

Meanwhile, mediators settled a supplier plant strike at Detroit that had threatened booming auto production.

There was no sign of an early settlement of the Los Angeles transit strike and the city was plagued further by a walkout of AFL bakers who bake 90 percent of the city's bread.

Picket Line Brush

Police and ambulances turned out at Oklahoma City when special agents of the Santa Fe Railroad tried to take a diesel locomotive through a picket line at the strikebound Capitol Steel & Iron Co.

Witnesses said pickets of the AFL Iron Workers Union grabbed the agents as they rode on the cowcatcher of the engine. Two agents were hospitalized with injuries while four other agents and a union official received lesser injuries.

Oklahoma City police seized seven union members after the melee and authorities said the county attorney would be asked to file charges against them.

It was the second attempt to crack the picket line at the plant. Last Monday three pickets were injured when a Santa Fe locomotive sought to enter.

Negotiations were resumed in the Pittsburgh milk strike as three incidents of violence also were reported. Concrete chunks were hurled through the windows of two dairies and two bullets were fired through the window of a sandwich shop whose owner reportedly had been giving free milk to parents with small children.

UAW Ends Strike

The CIO United Auto Workers called off a six-day strike at the Motor Products Corp. of Detroit, which makes moldings and and trim for major auto firms. Terms were not disclosed, but the UAW was believed to have won a pattern pension plan.

Negotiators arranged new meetings in the Los Angeles transit strike in which the county grand jury had called for a special legislative session to rule out such strikes by law. The Shrine convention added to the turmoil caused by the tieup.

The bakery strike closed 25 wholesale bakeries at Los Angeles and similar bakers' walkouts were in progress in Seattle, Wash.; Portland, Ore.; St. Louis, Mo., and downstate Illinois cities.

Elsewhere on the labor front, AFL longshoremen crippled the Lake ports of Toledo, Lorain, Huron and Fairport, Ohio, in a strike, and striking employes kept the New York World-Telegram and Sun from publishing for the sixth day.

Leukemia Victim

Jerry Moser Sees Sunset; Then He Dies

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Eight-year-old Jerry Moser, whose stubborn fight against leukemia lasted longer than most folks thought it would, will be buried Wednesday at 11 a. m. from Christ Episcopal Church in Alexandria.

Jerry

The one-sided battle ended late Sunday when Jerry died peacefully in the arms of his father, Frank M. Moser at Alexandria Hospital where the lad had spent most of his time since he was stricken last December.

Although his parents, who live at 802 S. View ter., Alexandria, never gave up hope, doctors said there could be only one outcome—death. Even specialists in blood diseases and the newest of "wonder" drugs couldn't help him.

Jerry himself was sure he would be cured—until the last hour. Then, he had what "might have been a premonition," his father recalled yesterday.

Minutes before he died, his father said, Jerry wanted to get out of his bed and look at the sunset from his hospital window. His father said he would describe it to him.

"No, daddy," Jerry replied, "there are things there that I can see and maybe you don't understand."

Jerry's father took him to the window, he related, and watched the lad as he stood for a few moments. Then Jerry returned to his hospital cot. A minute later he died in his father's arms.

Jerry's biggest moment since his illness came last Christmas when he was permitted to leave the hospital to spend the holiday with his parents. It was then that he received the bicycle he had been wanting for more than a year and had a trial ride before a relapse sent him back to his hospital bed.

He was the Mosers' only child.

Couple Wed 18 Months Now Has 4 Children

Chicago, June 19 (AP). — The John P. O'Connors didn't have any children 51 weeks ago. Now they have four—two sets of identical twins.

"Pretty good for a man who has been married only 18 months," Tavernkeeper O'Connor said today. He is 33, his wife 31.

The O'Connors' second set—John Patrick 3d, and Matthew Michael—was born late yesterday—Father's Day. Their big sisters—Margaret Ann and Mary Beth—will be a year old Sunday.

More Refugees Assured Aid By Jewish Units

Two Jewish organizations jointly announced yesterday that they will aid an increased number of refugees to settle here as a result of passage of the Displaced Persons Act.

The announcement was made by the United Jewish Appeal of Greater Washington and the Jewish Social Service Agency, which have a quota of aid of five families a month now.

How many more families the organization will aid has not been specified, a Jewish Social Service Agency spokesman said, but the number is not expected to be great as the plan is to settle the incoming families in all parts of the country.

It is estimated that some 20,000 Jewish refugees will be eligible for resettlement in the United States under the new bill, in addition to the 25,000 refugees already expected this year.

Under the DP Act it is necessary to provide specific asurances of both jobs and homes for the refugees before they can be admitted for permanent residence. The two local organizations have advised the United Service for New Americans, a national agency which facilitates Americanization and resettlement of refugees, that they could provide assurance of jobs and homes for refugees here.

Youth Shoots Self In Leg Accidentally

A 17-year-old Silver Spring youth accidentally shot himself in the right leg with a .22 caliber target pistol yesterday, Montgomery County police reported.

The youth, Kenneth William Copeland of 603 McNeill rd., was treated at Washington Sanitarium. Police said the pistol was discharged while in a hip holster as the youth was starting on a hike.

No Further Layoffs in Navy, Kimball Tells Norfolk Group

Norfolk, Va., June 19 (AP).—Undersecretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball today assured delegates to the first Eastern Area Conference of Industrial Relations "that there will not be any further layoffs, except minor ones as work loads fluctuate. I think I can assure you you will have stable working conditions for the next few years."

Speaking before 380 civilian employes of the Navy, meeting at the Norfolk Naval Base, Kimball said reductions in the civilian force last year were "very serious," but he explained it was the Navy's feeling that it was better to make severe cuts at once rather than to keep chopping the civilian force month after month.

There are now, he said, about 291,000 civilian employes in the Navy and some 79,000 were laid off last year. This caused "terrific unrest," Kimball said.

He said the Navy is now so set up that it must be maintained at at least its present size.

The Undersecretary gave a brief history of Navy-civilian employe relations and noted that how the average work week has been lowered from more than 60 hours to an average of 38 to 40 hours.

Harvard Patrons Match $5 Million From Rockefeller

Cambridge, Mass., June 20 (U.P.) The Harvard School of Business Administration will receive five million dollars from John D. Rockefeller jr., shortly because it met his challenge and raised a similar amount by its own efforts in the past year.

President James B. Conant of Harvard announced that the school had received enough in gifts and pledges—two weeks before the deadline — to fulfill the stipulations of Rockefeller.

"Mr. Rockefeller set a challenge for us a year ago," Conant said, "and it has been a thrilling experience to see others meet that challenge."

Group Studies Relationship Among People

A 5-day institute on Human Relations and Intergroup Understanding, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, opened yesterday at American University.

Dr. Prudence Bostwick, supervisor of the Department of Public Instruction of the Denver Schools, gave the opening lecture, "How schools and communities (particularly schools) can work for better human relations."

Following her talk, the group, composed mostly of District public school teachers, separated into small discussion groups. Today's speaker will be Walter Beatty, of the Child Institute, University of Maryland, who will talk on "How Children Grow," at 9 a. m.

Perhaps You're Younger Than You Think

by Nancy Underhill

There is a new type of home facial treatment, "a contour corrective treatment," they call it, that turns out to be probably the most exciting thing on the horizon since Rudolph Valentino and the invention of the permanent wave.

My defense for having held out on you with the news is that the facts are pretty startling. During the year when the formula was being case-tested the comments sounded altogether too ecstatic. If a series of home treatments using one lotion could cope with coarsening skin, puffy, drooping cheek muscles, heavy jowls and other past-30 afflictions of my sex, the millennium was near. I just didn't believe it.

Well, how wrong can I get? There I sat, a woman "somewhat past 30" (not to put it too bluntly) with every year showing. And there, for weeks, right spang in front of me on this desk, sat the answer to a prayer for younger skin. But me, the cynic, the skeptic, the smarty-pants who couldn't be told anything, I wasn't taken in.

Then I had lunch with an old friend I hadn't seen for years. It was a shock. In high school she'd been definitely the wallflower type. And now suddenly, on the north side of 30, she was radiant, a lovely woman. "Well, who is he?" I asked.

"Who is who?" She was genuinely puzzled.

"Why, THE MAN, of course," I said, crossly. "Only one thing lights up a woman's skin like that. It's spelled L*O*V*E."

She shook her head reproachfully. "And you in the business," she said. And then she told me.

Not love but a new formula and a prescribed treatment was the secret. Ten minutes of precision massage per night with the inspired blend of oils and astringent (no hormones). And by precision massage, I mean you must apply the lotion with all the conscientious attention of a bride with her first recipe. You can't just slap the stuff on occasionally when you happen to think of it and expect to come up all peaches and cream. But if you follow the very specific directions that come with the bottle, something like this will happen:

First: There is an immediate effect. Your skin feels cleaner, looks brighter (and the way it reacts you know it has been starving from the lack of attention).

A few days later, peering at your surprised face in the mirror, you think you're imagining things. Skin begins to look clearer, less dry, has more natural color showing through.

Presently you begin to get outside confirmation. "Been on a vacation?" someone asks. "You look like a million." Lovely words! How long since you've heard them?

The long term results can be even more gratifying because regular use of the precise, "press-lift" technique of application (easy to learn, too), with the luscious lotion imparts a tingling aliveness to the sleepy muscles being treated.

This is a fine treatment, I'm telling you about and a happy confession to be making. I was wrong. You probably ARE younger than you think. Why not give Araline and the Araline Treatment a chance? For further information, visit or call

Guard in Jail Death Case Back on Job

Jail Guard James E. Kirkpatrick, who has admitted using a towel to subdue 30-year-old Leroy Davis a few hours before Davis died, was restored to duty yesterday after six weeks' enforced leave.

Further disciplinary action or criminal charges in Davis' death awaits a report from the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department.

In a report submitted by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, to United States Attorney George Morris Fay last month, the coroner stated that Davis had a chronic heart condition and died of acute heart failure.

Dr. MacDonald also said his investigations disclosed "no marks of violence . . . as well as no marks made by strangulation."

Kirkpatrick, 33, of 1229 Savannah pl. se., admitted he wrapped a towel about Davis' neck during a struggle in the District Jail on April 28, the night Davis died.

Kirkpatrick's first report on the struggle made no mention of the towel incident. The second did. Kirkpatrick was suspended May 4.

Donald Clemmer, director of the District Department of Corrections, said that in restoring Kirkpatrick he took the position that Davis did "not die of the towel incident although it was highly improper to use a towel."

"I can't take disciplinary action now, because we are still awaiting a report from . . . Justice. But I have discussed this matter with the members of my staff and we agreed it might be weeks before we hear further from the department . . . and so we decided to reinstate Kirkpatrick."

Davis was awaiting trial on a charge of housebreaking, and after the struggle collapsed and died.

Numbers Charge

Roundhouse Gaming Raid Nets 5 Men

Vice squadmen yesterday arrested five men on numbers charges at the "Ivy City" railroad yard roundhouse, near New York ave. and Fenwick st. ne.

Lieut. Roy Blick of the vice squad said four of the men were laborers.

The fifth man he identified as Hubert L. Kelly, 25, of 636 8th st. ne. Blick said Kelly was picking up numbers slips when police made the arrests. All five were charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

Police said the laborers were Andrew J. Bell, 33, of 420 W st. nw.; Jack J. Johnson, 39, of 1121 South Carolina ave. se.; Herman S. Washington, 31, of 1349 Perry pl. nw., and Lemuel A. Felder, 29, of 806 E st. ne.

The four laborers and Kelly were released under $1500 bond in an arraignment before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence. Their cases were continued until July 12.

Blick said vice squadmen had the roundhouse under observation for 10 days before making the arrests. Warrants were obtained, police said.

Shortly before the raid, said Blick, an undercover police operative made a 10-cent play with one of the suspects, using a marked coin.

When the man was searched, Blick continued, the coin was missing. The suspect told police he spent the dime at a grocery store, and police had to search the cash register at the store before recovering the coin, Blick reported.

One Visit Only

Amherst, Mass. (U.P.).—Louis G. Eddy celebrated his 83rd birthday with a boast that he never had been visited by a doctor since his birth.

'Pimple-Face,' 'False Nose' Bandit Suspects Indicted

Three confessed members of the "Pimple Faced Gang" and two confessed "false nose" bandits were indicted in District Court yesterday on robbery charges.

Wilmer D. Campbell, Byron E. Heslop, 22, both of 4800 68th ave., Defense Heights, Md., and Joseph C. Danner, 26, 1208 Evarts st. ne., were charged with the March 30 holdup of $1500 from the Sheet Metal Workers' Union headquarters, 1017 K st. nw.

Campbell and Danner also were indicted on charges of the armed robbery of $349.51 from the Fruit Growers Express Co., 1101 Vermont ave. nw., April 12.

Charges Against 2 Ignored

Charges against two other youths, who police said had confessed to "Pimple Face Gang" holdups, were ignored by the grand jury. They are Albert J. Mozzone, 18, and William Lee Mason, 18, both of the Evarts st. address.

Indicted as "false nose" bandits were William P. Plumley, 26, 409 48th ave., Capitol Heights, Md., and Harris Lovett, 27, Randall Cliffs, Md.

They are charged in three indictments of stealing two cars and staging three holdups: $323 from a liquor store at 61st and Dix sts. ne., April 8; $2055 from the Economy Finance Corporation, 1430 Florida ave. ne., May 15; and $842 from the Naylor Theater, 2834 Alabama ave. se., April 29.

Both Plumley and Lovett pleaded guilty to these holdups when they were arraigned May 27.

57 Indictments Returned

The grand jury returned a total of 57 indictments.

Julius Evans, 36, 1605 N. Capitol st., was indicted for the second degree murder June 3, of Madison McKoy, 29, 48 DeFrees st. nw.

Otis Mitchell, 35, 637 S. Carolina ave. se., was indicted for assaulting police officer Vincent G. Lusby with a dangerous weapon.

Cab Driver Indicted By Arlington Jury

Gene H. White, 25, of Baileys Crossroads, Va., a taxi driver, yesterday was indicted by an Arlington County grand jury on a charge of manslaughter.

The charge grew out of the death of Mrs. Nettie F. Martin following a collision April 24 between her car and White's. He entered a plea of not guilty to the charge and trial date was set for July 31.

Among other indictments was one of housebreaking against William L. Blount, 24, of 1543 8th st. nw., and one against William Edward Padgett, 34, of 2247 Shannon pl. se., for grand larceny.

Two youths who were charged with grand larceny waived indictment and entered pleas of guilty. They are Benton Hitt, jr., 21, of 217 S. Patrick st., Alexandria; and Robert Almond, 18, of 1827 Duke st., Alexandria.

Also waiving indictment and pleading guilty was Robert Chester Jones, 20, a painter, of 1227 Bluemont dr., Arlington, charged with rape.

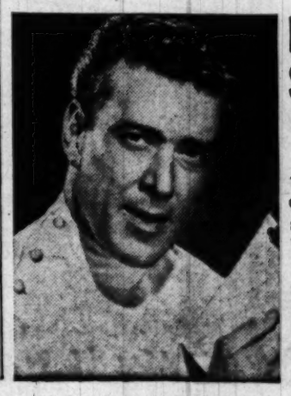
HOW MILD CAN A CIGARETTE BE?
MORE PEOPLE SMOKE CAMELS THAN ANY OTHER CIGARETTE!
"Million Dollar Voice" Sings Camels' Praises

EZIO PINZA, famous for his starring role in the smash-hit South Pacific, says: "Mildness is all-important to me as a singer. I smoke the cigarette that agrees with my throat . . . Camel!"
Noted throat specialists report on 30-DAY TEST of Camel smokers:
Not One Single Case of Throat Irritation Due to Smoking CAMELS

Hundreds of men and women were in this coast-to-coast test. They smoked Camels—and only Camels—for 30 consecutive days. Each week, noted throat specialists examined the throat of every smoker in the test—2,470 examinations in all—with the above findings!
Make Your Own Thirty-Day Camel Mildness Test... in your "T-Zone"!
That's T for Throat, T for Taste. See how mild a cigarette can be!
Smokers are Testing Cigarettes More Critically than Ever Before—Millions Prove Camel Mildness in their own "T-Zones" (T for Throat...T for Taste)
Yes, more and more smokers are finding there is one sensible way to test a cigarette... smoke that cigarette pack after pack, day after day—for 30 days!
That's just the test that Camel asks you to make for yourself!
What can you, the smoker, really learn from the trick tests and short cuts you hear about over and over again? From one puff of this cigarette... a sniff of that cigarette... an inhale of one brand... an exhale of another?
No, you don't have to rely on tricks! You have your own "T-Zone" (your Throat and your Taste)—the best possible proving ground for a cigarette. And for the right answer—the sensible answer—smoke Camels, and only Camels, in your "T-Zone" for 30 days. Once you've tested Camel's choice tobaccos as a steady smoke—pack after pack—you'll discover how mild and good-tasting a cigarette can be!
Top "Pop" Singer says Camel's "Tops" with her

FRAN WARREN—radio and recording star, recently chosen by the American Academy of Entertainment as "Queen of Song". "My voice means my living," Fran tells you. "My own test won me to Camels. They agree with my throat—Camels are fun to smoke!"



MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS than any other cigarette
A nationwide survey of doctors in every State of the forty-eight revealed that more doctors smoke Camels than any other brand.
Doctors in every branch of medicine were queried. "What cigarette do you smoke, Doctor?" was the question asked of 113,597 doctors. And the brand named most was Camel!

Cross Section, U. S. A.

SPORTS
Mel Parnell, star hurler of the Boston Red Sox, says, "I made my own 30-day test of Camel mildness, and I sure enjoyed it! Mildest cigarette I ever smoked! They agree with my throat."

BUSINESS
Warren Ostrom, insurance broker, is a Camel smoker from way back. "30-day test?" he says, "why, I tested Camels for myself years ago! And Camel mildness is always welcome to my throat."

AVIATION
Ruth Shafer uses her voice plenty as an airport control-tower operator. "In my job, it's a must that I be in good voice," she will tell you. "And... Camel's my cigarette!"

HOME LIFE
Housewife Mrs Jane Christman says, "Serving Camels is the mark of a thoughtful hostess. I've tried and tested many brands. There's nothing quite like Camels for taste and mildness."

4-H Leaders Given Youth Activity Tips

Greater participation by young people in planning and leadership of youth activities was urged yesterday at a conference of State 4-H club leaders in the Departmental Auditorium.

Bernice Bridges, director of the youth division of the National Social Welfare Assembly, told the group "a youth organization belongs to young people even though it is sponsored by adults."

The Right Reverend Monsignor L. G. Ligutti, executive secretary of the National Catholic Rural Life Conference, suggested informal education to meet the needs of rural youths. Monsignor Ligutti said the most important educational agency is the home.

The sixth day of the twentieth annual 4-H club camp also was marked by an international conference. Representatives from France, Ireland, the Netherland, Scotland, Sweden, Canada, Cuba and Switzerland attended.

At a general assembly last night, M. L. Wilson, director of extension work of the Department of Agriculture, made awards of fellowships to John M. Howell of Klamath Falls, Oreg., and Donald E. Foltz, of Terre Haute, Ind. Worth $1200 each, the fellowships are for nine months' study at the Department of Agriculture.

ECA administrator Paul G. Hoffman will speak on international cooperation at 2:15 today in the Departmental Auditorium.

At 8 p. m. in the National Archives Building, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Knox T. Hutchinson will be the main speaker in a citizenship ceremony for 4-H members who have recently reached voting age.

Garden Hose Saves Well Digger

Associated Press WIREPHO

NEAR TRAGEDY—Trapped for two hours 14 feet below the surface, Milton Randall, 33-year-old Elkhart, Ind., well digger, was rescued Sunday after air pumped through a garden hose kept him alive. Picture was taken just after rescuers had uncovered his head. Randall was pulled to the surface unharmed

School Board Urged to Start Anti-Segregation Proceedings

A group of Negro teachers yesterday petitioned the District Board of Education to initiate legislation to end the segregated public school system here.

The American Federation of Teachers, local 27, in a letter to board members declared that the board should ask the Corporation Counsel to prepare such specific legislation for submission to Congress. The board follows this procedure in initiating legislation on other school matters, said the letter signed by Paul Cooke, president, and Don Goodloe, legislative representative.

The union said the separate school system has resulted in "inferior education" for Negro children "from the kindergarten through college." It further declared that segregation has fostered a feeling of inferiority in Negroes and superiority in whites, has set the pattern of segregation for the city and has resulted in "uneconomical expenditure of the taxpayers' money."

Army Worms Hurting Crops In Maryland

Widespread damage to Maryland grain crops from army worms, particularly on the Eastern Shore, was reported yesterday by T. L. Bissell, Extension Service entomologist at the University of Maryland.

Recently the pests have moved into Western Maryland, Bissell reported. To combat them, farmers are advised to use poison bait of bran and paris green, spread thinly over pastures, grain fields and corn.

Unusually large infestations by army worms already have been reported from other sections of the country, chiefly in the northern Great Plains area. The worms devour grass and eat the heads of grain.

Bissell urged farmers to get in touch with county agents at the first indication of invasion by the insects. In many fields, he said last night, insecticides are being applied by airplanes as well as ground machines.

can housewives in last fall's spectacular coffee boom.

The report recommended that the Attorney General keep an eye on the International Coffee Commission, of which this country is a member. It suggested prosecutions for antitrust violations. It also suggested that this country give technical aid to "other friendly nations" that might raise coffee in competition with South America.

Yesterday's protest declared those recommendations "would impair the living standards of the people of those nations and could leave their economies prostrate."

The 14 protestants added that their countries "like other countries, need dollars to purchase United States products and to maintain a flow of commerce north and south. A fair price for coffee would insure such interchange."

The protest already has brought action. Late yesterday a special, closed session of the committee was called for 10 a. m. today.

The committee's report, which suggested withholding allocations of Economic Cooperation Administration funds for coffee purchases, will "incite resentment" the 14 stated.

The protest declared that the the Senate Committee proposed that the United States bring pressure upon their governments to devalue their currencies. "The revaluation of currencies is an issue on which no sovereign government can accept dictation from another," they declared.

The protest likened the coffee situation to this country's crop surpluses. "The subcommittee unfortunately does not seem to be aware that most of the difficulties of coffee producers in the past have been caused by burdensome surpluses paralleling similar conditions in United States farm products.

"Such surpluses have even forced the burning of coffee that could not be sold, just as large surpluses of cotton and pork in the United States caused the plowing up of countless acres and the killing of millions of pigs."

The protest added that "taken as a whole the report plainly seeks to create the impression that coffee prices are unjustifiably high and that, as a result, consumers in this country should curtail coffee purchases from Latin America until such time as other nations, with the assistance of the United States, can produce coffee. This is a most unfriendly recommendation.

"In this connection," it added, "it is worthy to note that products and manufactures of the United States which are imported into the Latin-American countries have been through a long period of time steadily advancing in price without having been subjected to investigation by the governments concerned."

American officials were surprised at the bitterness of the protest. The complaint was unusual in both the sharpness of the criticism and the number of nations joining.

Ambassador Guillermo Sevilla Sacasa of Nicaragua, spokesman for the others, said that Acheson offered to help in any way he could. The party left the 15-minute parley, he added, "with optimism."

Senator Vandenberg Returns to Hospital

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) has entered Georgetown University Hospital for a checkup and rest, his office reported yesterday.

You know Skylark is fresh-because it's DATED FRESH EVERY DAY!

HERE'S WHY WE DATE SKYLARK:

It's your proof, your guarantee that your loaf of Skylark was freshly baked for today. Most other brands do not carry this proof. Always buy Skylark, in the red and white, candy-striped wrapper. You always know that Skylark is first-day fresh!

Each day's sale of Skylark is carefully estimated in advance. Then, Skylark's expert bakers mix all the fine ingredients, then pop the baking pans into the oven. Finally, as each toasty-brown loaf comes out, it is wrapped and sealed with a special end seal.

This end seal carries the day, Monday, or Tuesday, and so on. Then the loaves are rushed to your Safeway Store, just in time for sale. If there should be any unsold dated bread at the end of the day, it is removed—never again sold as fresh bread. No guesswork with Skylark—you know it's first-day fresh!

Skylark BREAD
DATED FRESH EVERY DAY!

Guaranteed
YOUR MONEY BACK IF SKYLARK ISN'T THE FINEST BREAD YOU'VE EVER EATEN
Not only do we guarantee that SKYLARK is fresh every day, but we guarantee you can't buy a better bread. If, for any reason, you are not satisfied with SKYLARK bread, we ask you to drop into any Safeway store and your money will be refunded immediately and without question.

Arms Aid Bill Wins Approval Of Two Senate Committees

for American use for military instead of economic purposes.

"The main objection to the proposal was that we didn't want to scramble up the ECA and arms programs," said Connally, adding that it would not have saved any money under the bill.

The two major changes in the bill limiting President Truman's powers would:

(1) Require that of the 75 million dollars earmarked for the "general area of China," 40 million dollars must be accounted for in the usual way—through the GAO—$27,500,000 must be reported on confidentially to Congress and only $7,500,000 could be used for secret purposes and not be accounted for publicly.

(A similar 75-million-dollar fund this year did not have to be explained at all. It is largely being spent for Indo-China and Indonesia.)

(2) Tighten up a proviso that would have let the President spend up to 10 percent of the total arms program to aid any country in the world threatened by communism. As rewritten yesterday he could divert such funds in an emergency only to a European nation not a member of the North Atlantic pact, after consultation with the other treaty partners.

The provision permits up to $122,500,000 to be extended in arms aid "to any other European nation whose strategic location makes it of direct importance to the defense of the North Atlantic and whose immediately increased ability to defend itself . . . contributes to the preservation of the peace and security of the North Atlantic area and is vital to the security of the United States."

Yugoslavia Reported in Mind

Administration chiefs are said to have had Yugoslavia in mind here, as it is likely the Government would want to help Tito if Russia attacks. However, Spain and other European nations not in the pact could also be armed in such circumstances.

Another major feature of the new bill would authorize the Government to arrange sales of arms to any friendly country on normal credit arrangements. Heretofore, such military sales have been on a strictly cash basis and limited as to the countries eligible.

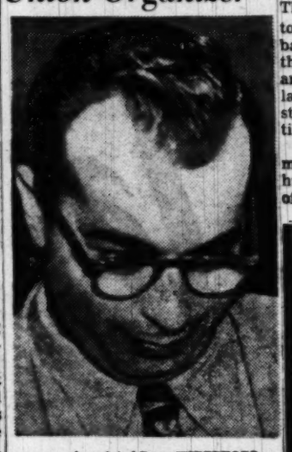
Denies He Killed Union Organizer



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

BENEDETTO MACRI, sought for a year and a half in a knife-slaying case, yesterday pleaded innocent to a first-degree murder indictment in New York. Macri, 37, who surrendered to Columnist Walter Winchell Sunday night, is charged in the slaying of William Lurye, an organizer for the AFL International Ladies Garment Workers Union. Another suspect still is at large. Macri was remanded to jail after his innocent plea

Senate Unit Drafts Hawaii Statehood Bill

The Senate Insular Committee completed work yesterday on a tentative draft of legislation to grant statehood to Hawaii and is expected to get busy later this week on the Alaska statehood bill.

Chairman O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said agreement had been reached on the Hawaii bill after technical amendments were approved.

The House has passed both bills.

N. J. High Court Assails Florida for Its Easy Divorces

Trenton, N. J., June 19 (NYHT).—The New Jersey Supreme Court today dismissed an alimony suit based on a Florida divorce, held the divorce invalid in this State, and denounced the "easy divorce" laws of Florida and some other states as contributing to a "national scandal."

The suit was brought by the former Marilyn Sheperd against her husband, Dr. Albert J. Ward, both of Morristown.

The opinion, written by Justice Clarence E. Case, held that Mrs. Ward had no capacity to establish a bona fide residence in Florida, that her suit there was a fraud upon the courts of both Florida and New Jersey, that she had obtained a decree "which by no skill or deception could be got here," and had imposed an unreasonable burden on her husband by filing in a distant state.

Amphitheater Is Delayed; Armory May Get Sesqui Drama

of July fireworks show at the Monument Grounds.

Carter T. Barron, executive vice chairman, explained the commission agreed to pick up the tab on the traditionally well-attended event because "we feel Independence Day is such an appropriate day to salute in this Sesquicentennial year."

In years past, the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade has underwritten the Fourth of July celebration. It normally pays its own way, although two years ago the event went in the red about $3000.

Admission to the Monument grounds seats this year will be half the price of previous years, 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

Sesqui-added features will include a stage with a Liberty Bell and huge U. S. A. letters in the background, flanked by four armed service bands—a total of 400 musicians.

If it does not prove too expensive, Fourth of July planners will purchase special "set piece" fireworks which will shoot off highlights of the American story in pyrotechnics.

Present budgeting calls for an $8000 outlay with a potential gate take of about $3900, Barron said. In addition, Sesqui medallions will be sold for $1 a piece.

The Greater National Capital Committee and the District Recreation Board which have underwritten the fireworks show in the past, will continue as nominal sponsors. The Recreation Board asked active participation about a month ago.

Meanwhile, a Revolutionary War watercolor from the personal collection of King eGorge VI of Britian was received yesterday at the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

The painting is on loan for the Sesqui-sponsored "The American Processional" art exhibition, opening July 8.

In a brief ceremony, Sir Oliver Franks, British Ambassador to the United States, presented the watercolor to Robert V. Fleming, a commission member.

The painting, from the Royal Library at Windsor Castle, depicts a naval engagement on Lake Champlain between Revolutionary and British forces.

A Loan From King George VI

FROM THE ROYAL COLLECTION—British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks yesterday presented a Revolutionary War watercolor from King George's own collection to appear in "The American Processional" exhibition of historical art to be shown at the Corcoran Gallery beginning July 8. Edward F. Neild, sr., of Shreveport, La., said to be the most conservative of the three architects, and also said to have been a friend of the President for some years.

Term of two other members of the seven-man commission have also expired, but the White House gave no indication yesterday as to whether they will be replaced. They are Frederick V. Murphy, Washington architect, and Maurice Sterne of Mount Kisco, N. Y., a painter. Members of the commission who are not reappointed customarily serve until a successor is named.

Term of the seventh member, David E. Finley, director of the National Gallery of Art, does not expire until May 14, 1951.

The commission, established by act of Congress in 1910 as an advisory body on public buildings and monuments and whose members serve without pay, has long been of a conservative complexion.

A year ago the President was said to be planning to "modernize" the commission, which he felt had "never been very constructive."

Clarke, a member of the commission since 1932 and chairman since 1937, is said to have given the President no indication of disapproving the plan for building a balcony on the south portico of the White House when it was first broached, but to have later joined other members and critics in opposing it. This "switch" is said to have rankled with Mr. Truman, and to have led to ignoring the recommendation of Clarke's six colleagues that he reappointed.

Clarke, dean of the Cornell University school of architecture, said he did not anticipate reappointment.

Who the new chairman will be is up to the commission itself. Members choose their own chairman.

Wounded Assault Suspect Recovering

Samuel Crawford, 28, of 4251 Dix st. ne., who was shot early Sunday by police, was reported in good condition yesterday at Gallinger Hospital. Police charged him with attempted assault on Mrs. Mary Freeling, 30, of 5149 Lee st. ne.

Police Lieut. John Monroe said he shot Crawford in the hip after three times ordering him to stop in the 4200 block of Washington pl. ne.

Renaming of B Street Seen As Helpful to Travellers

Extension of Constitution and Independence aves. from the Capitol to the Anacostia River would reduce travel confusion, a handful of citizens testified yeesterday.

The witnesses appeared at a hearing called by the Commissioners on a proposal to rename B st ne. Constitution ave. and B st. se. Independence ave. The streets are continuations of the two avenues.

The Commissioners have proposed the change as a step in the East Capitol st. development. Eventually the area between the two B sts. is to be turned into a park area resembling the Mall.

William Maio, representing the Southeast Citizens Association, the Southeast Businessmen's Association and the Capitol Hill Restoration Committee, said that renaming of the streets would end the confusion that now exists as to where the streets end and the avenues pick up.

Clinton N. Howard, general superintendent of the International Reform Federation, declared that although his organization recently had 100,000 envelopes printed with the address of 134 B st. ne., it would gladly scrap them if the street were renamed.

The present system of calling a street Constitution ave. on one side of the Capitol and B st. ne. on the other is "as confusing as a session of Congress to the Man from Mars," Howard said.

Others who favored renaming the streets included Mrs. Mildred V. Palmer, representing the National Woman's Party, and George Showers, representing residents of the 1700 block of B st. ne.

Are You Listening?

A fellow called us up the other day and said he wanted to tell us something in confidence. Then he paused a moment, cleared his throat and added nervously: "I'm calling from a phone that I'm sure is okay—in the Capitol. But how about yours? Are you sure your wire isn't tapped?" We said that we were pretty sure.

Of course, Howard Hughes might have said the same thing to anyone who had called him up when he was here in 1947 for a Senate investigation of his wartime plane contracts. But he would have been sadly mistaken, according to Drew Pearson; the columnist declared in this newspaper last Wednesday that Mr. Hughes' telephone was tapped from the day he set foot in Washington—tapped at the instance of Senators Owen Brewster and Homer Ferguson. Superintendent Barrett of the Metropolitan Police Department admitted the following day that he had submitted to the Department of Justice a report on an investigation to determine whether a District police officer had tapped Mr. Hughes' telephone at the behest of the Senators.

Wiretapping is expressly forbidden by the Federal Communications Act. It is forbidden whether practiced by private citizens, by foreign spies, by local police officers or by the FBI. Yet the Attorney General has acknowledged that he authorizes the FBI to tap wires in a limited number of cases involving espionage and kidnaping. It would be exceedingly embarrassing, therefore, for the Department of Justice to prosecute anybody for wiretapping—that is, for violating a law which the department itself violates whenever the Attorney General thinks that the end justifies the means. The department carefully avoids this embarrassment.

J. Edgar Hoover issued a statement in January that the FBI at that time had "less than 170 telephone taps in existence, confined to internal security cases, throughout the entire United States and its possessions." We have no means of knowing how many of these taps are in the Capital of the land of the free or whether they involve specifically our telephone or yours or yours. We have no means of knowing how many additional taps may be in existence by other Federal agencies, by United States Senators or by private detectives, blackmailers or espionage agents.

There are a couple of ways of looking at this situation. You can laugh it off and pretend you don't care who listens to what you say to your wife or your business partner or your lawyer or your physician. Mr. Pearson, for example, is reported to have remarked that in view of the frequency of taps on his telephone he is thinking of selling time for commercials. Or, you can take it seriously and wonder why we look with so much scorn and pity on the plight of the poor Russians who don't dare to tell each other anything for fear that the secret police will eavesdrop on them. An invasion of privacy is a loss of liberty—whether it takes place in Moscow or in Washington.

Blackwash

The Amerasia case has now been studied by two grand juries and two congressional committees. It has been canvassed from every conceivable angle; and those who wished to flog new life into this dead horse have been accorded every reasonable opportunity to do so. Pretty soon, we think, the country had better forget about it and pass on to more pressing current problems. Senators Hickenlooper and McCarthy and their colleagues in the group of 21 Republicans demanding a new investigation seem determined to indict somebody for something, no matter how many grand juries find no substance to their suspicions.

We have no wish (as witness our plea for a nonpartisan commission on the national security) to see anyone whitewashed in connection with the case. Neither do we wish to see anyone blackwashed for the mere satisfaction of the sensation seekers. And we think Vice President Barkley was quite right yesterday to remind the Senate that it is not a grand jury.

A grand jury of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia first investigated the case in June, 1945. It indicted three of the six individuals charged before it. Of the 20 grand jurors, no more than 14—at least 12 are required to hand down an indictment—voted to indict any of these three. Fewer than six voted to indict any of the remaining three.

A subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee studied the case, including the proceedings before the grand jury, and reported in October, 1946. A majority of the subcommittee declared:

> No criminal intent on the part of the subject parties was ever established, and there was no evidence that any of the documents or copies was ever put to any use harmful to the war effort. A study of the evidence made it clear that neither espionage nor spying could be proved. The cases were ably presented before the grand jury . . . After a most painstaking study, we certify that there is no evidence, nor hint, justifying adverse criticism of either grand jury, any prosecuting attorney, FBI, judicial, or other official.

On Thursday, a grand jury in New York reported on the case. It, too, gave Government officials a clean bill of health in their handling of the ancient matter. A Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee now has the case under consideration. If it, too, concludes that the requirements of justice were fulfilled faithfully, the dead bones had better be buried, though we doubt whether they will be so buried till at least November. However, somewhere there must be an end to the assumption that men are guilty until proved innocent.

Asia Calling

It is a good thing that the Johnson-Bradley-Dulles-MacArthur conference in Japan is discussing Japan in the setting of Far Eastern Asia. The problem of Japan cannot be isolated. This country has an obligation immediately to start putting Japan in the way of independence, and the way to do it is not simply to quit, but to relate an American policy on Far Eastern Asia, including China, to the future of Japan. Merely to quit would mean to endanger, not to grant, independence for Japan. A peaceful and a safeguarded Japan has a great role to play in promoting conditions of economic and political stability on the opposite rim of the Pacific.

The difficulties of hammering out a Far East policy have been increased by postwar neglect of the real interest of America and the consequent deterioration of the American position. That interest should be based on the premise of keeping off the mainland. The United States is not a land power in Asian affairs, but an oceanic power. So that when the Republicans of the Eightieth Congress sold the Administration a bill of goods on the China mainland, they did a disservice to American policy. Instead of Nanking, they should have thought of Formosa. There should have been a repossession of Formosa in behalf of the Formosans while the Chinese were killing one another off in their civil commotion. If the Chinese had been left alone, they might have stopped the slaughter, and come together on the cooperative plan advocated in 1945 by Ambassador Hurley. At any rate, they have lasted four thousand years by a fidelity to compromise.

But that is now water over the dam except as a lesson in the folly of mixing into the affairs of the Asian mainland. Judging from the fresh entanglement in Indo-China, the lesson has still to be learned, though in Tokyo there may be a reassessment of Far East policy in terms of the true American interest.

In this respect Formosa and the Philippines are the most urgent considerations to the Tokyo conferees. Nothing can be—or, rather, nothing should be—done about Formosa till there has been a disposition of the problem of Chiang Kai-shek. It would be putting the cart before the horse to have a policy on Formosa without agreeing first on a policy on Chiang Kai-shek. For our part we hope that this will take the form of persuading him to quit the Far Eastern scene, for he is an old man of the sea on the American neck, frustrating a clear policy based upon the realities of Far Eastern Asia. If Formosa is merely regarded as a pawn in mainland affairs, then the United States will be contributing to chaos, instead of promoting order. As to the Philippines, a step in the right direction seems at hand in Filipino agreement to invite an American commission to help the Quirino government put its house in order, and this may open the way to the return of order and the end of corruption. The while the United States should keep the sea lanes open and free to peaceful trading and secure against aggressors. Here shooting would be justified in the manner of the recent Russian treatment of an American airplane in the Baltic—at gunrunners either from Vladivostok or from the ports of Communist China or at Chinese Nationalist blockaders. A declaration of intent in this respect would be as influential in Far Eastern Asia as action itself.

The Pacific war destroyed the balance of power in Asia, leaving a free field to Stalinist imperialism. The task of the peacemakers should be to try to restore that balance. This means an approach to Japan which would give it the opportunity to develop its old financial and commercial relations with its old customers in Asia. That encouragement would correspond to the strategic interest of America—that and the limitation of American intervention to offshore policing.

Schuman No. 2

Robert Schuman, ceaseless and patient crusader for the removal of Franco-German conflict, has come up with another initiative aimed at the same goal. He has asked the United States and Britain to cooperate in summoning a world conference to relieve the population pressure in western Europe. The idea is as valuable as it is obvious. Yet it has been bandied about for almost four years without provoking action. Originally a French concept, it was brought up by Bidault as one of the members of the Council of Foreign Ministers meeting in Moscow early in 1947, but nothing was done. Last May 3 this newspaper asked what had happended to the proposal, saying:

> A unifying idea in the world of today would be a comprehensive emigration-immigration policy of relieving Europe's surpluses in such open spaces, as, say, Australia, Oceania, and Brazil. Here is something new, something that could capture men's imagination, something that would unify, something in which a host of nations East and West have a common interest, something that would create a diversion from the present descent into war.

Ten days later at a meeting of the Foreign Ministers, Schuman revived the project, and Messrs. Acheson and Bevin agreed upon a study. Possibly Mr. Schuman feared that this would lead to another interment; at any rate, he is now making a direct appeal to the United States and Britain to join with France in sponsoring a world conference.

If this appeal turns out to be fruitless, Mr. Schuman would be well advised to call a conference himself, as he did on the pooling of the heavy industry of western Europe. For a favorable environment does exist. There is a much more hospitable reception to immigration nowadays in such havenot areas as Australia, Oceania, and Brazil. The main haves are Western Germany and Italy, and in the latter country the human surplus constitutes the nation's major problem. If the haves and havenots could be brought together, emigration of excess workers might be organized in the manner advocated by Bidault. A significant role could be played in such a transfer of people by American capital. Mr. R. G. Casey, who is well remembered from his days as Australian Ambassador in Washington, has immigration within his province in the Menzies ministry, and he is reported to have said that room is available in Australia to immigrants with tools. Well, tools are an American specialty. They were supplied for war and there is no reason why they could not be supplied for peace. Here is an opportunity for post-1952 activity—and one that Mr. Gordon Gray, now engaged in wrestling with the so-called dollar gap, might explore.

Relaxation of population pressure in Germany and Italy would constitute a fundamental grapple with reconstruction. It would help to keep Italy democratic. It would assuage any residual fears in France about pooling their heavy industry with Germany's. It would lessen the stresses and strains in western Europe, and keep eyes turned west, instead of east. Only some such solution can offset the only victory that Hitler scored, i.e., the demographic one.

Milk Settlement

If there was relatively little actual hardship in the eight-day Washington milk strike, there was plenty of serious inconvenience. The compromise by which the strike was settled is so obvious that it is incredible that the formula took eight days to work out. The fact that the union and the combined managements were willing to shut down a vital service over what will seem to most persons a trivial difference which did not involve wages is a shocking commentary on the lack of understanding within the milk industry of its relation to the public welfare. Union and management would be grossly mistaken to take lightly the outraged rumblings from the public. A repetition of such a stoppage, without a real attempt to arbitrate differences, would be sure to bring pressure for more drastic regulation and perhaps compulsory arbitration—pressure which Congress might well heed.

Actually, when the disputants got down to discussion of the issues, progress was fairly rapid. What muddied the water was the union's filing of lockout charges with the National Labor Relations Board. This was a serious tactical mistake, whatever the technicalities involved, and it served merely to embitter feelings. As for the settlement itself, management won a concession in the 5½-day instead of the 5-day work week demanded by the union, and the union won its point that dairy plants should remain open on Sunday. The continuation of every-other-day milk delivery seems to us in the public interest, though the hints of a price rise make the victory questionable.

Two lessons may be derived from the strike. The first is that the District Commissioners need to assign responsibility for keeping them posted on possible stoppages in vital services. They cannot afford to be caught off guard again. More than that, the District needs a basic plan, applicable in many emergencies of this kind, for the continuation of essential services to hospitals, invalids and the like through a priority system.

The second lesson is more complicated and concerns the strike less directly. Several measures to permit the importation of milk were proposed in Congress during the strike. They ought to be pushed even though a settlement has been reached. First of all, they would provide protection against future emergencies; but beyond that, there is little sense in the proposal before the Commissioners to prohibit importation of milk from farms not inspected by the District Health Department, so long as that milk meets Public Health Service standards.

What is actually at stake here is the hold exercised by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association. In some cases the dairies themselves are the victims of this producer monopoly. The fact that Washington has one of the highest prices for milk of any city adjoining a major milkshed—even though it is milk of admittedly the highest quality—calls for reexamination of the marketing procedure by which the producers virtually write their own price ticket. The question for the Commissioners and Congress to consider is whether outmoded and prohibitive sanitation requirements do not play into the hands of a convicted monopoly and reduce milk competition virtually to zero.

FARMER'S WIFE

Taking him, I understand
That I am marrying the land,
An old, beloved liaison,
She mistress, I the wife of one
Born of her love and born of her bone,
And I must learn, and learn it soon,
Wit it is, who always yields
To the smiling tyranny of fields.
By his arm's loosening, I know
He turns from me to the window's glow,
Where the earth is sleeping with the moon,
For in her moods and tantrums live
Fulfillment I can never give.
Plow and harrow, reap and sow.
The ritual of love possessed
His father's fathers, all their lives.
I, with those dim, complacent wives
Content myself with second-best.

"Party Vs. Government"

Congratulations to The Washington Post on its recognition of honesty and its expression of faith in the integrity of an official of a foreign government in your June 16 editorial "Party Vs. Government." It could be the beginning of a new era.

The quotation which I refer to, and which must be applauded by all, in substance, is:

"Since Mr. Attlee is an honest man, we prefer to think that in the (House of) Commons on Tuesday he declared his independence of the party line (in his attitude toward unified action by Europe as contrasted with that of the British Labor Party) . . . instead of putting up a smokescreen."

A belief in the honesty of purpose of representatives of foreign governments in their expressions dealing with the foreign policy of those nations as it affects the rest of the world is an attitude, which if continued and expanded in this time of alleged world crisis, might control destiny and change the course of world events. It might bring about the peace and thoughts of peace which the American citizen desires to foster throughout the world. This attitude of "faith" and belief in the "honesty" and "fair dealing" of man to man has been missing too long from our press, our Government and our national life. Your expressed attitude might even become a contagion and overflow into diplomatic channels where much advantageous use might be made of it.

A foreign diplomat recently addressing a private gathering was just as frank, trusting and believing as your editorial expression. In reply to questions he stated that diplomats were less frank and trusting and more austere in their dealing with one another than he had been in his discussion. This should not be. "A man's word should be his bond." Your attitude furthers the dignity of man and shortens the arms' length with which we have been dealing with others. Keep up the idea—spread its use—instill it in the headline writers—it will serve us well.

Hapsburg Empire

Your May 7 correspondent, Mrs. Jean P. Lee, is quite right in asserting that there was a large emigration from Austria-Hungary to the United States. This emigration was, however, much smaller than that of Germany, Italy, and Scandinavia, whereas England and France had their own colonial empires to populate. It was no mere coincidence that those who returned as soon as they had saved enough were mainly from the former "oppressed" nationalities of Austria-Hungary.

It is frequently alleged that one of the main courses of the First World War was the Austro-Hungarian policy of retaining by force the Serbian and Romanian minorities. In fact, these minorities were always free to emigrate.

In conniving at the destruction of this monarchy the Western Allies made a grave error. In consequence, a situation arose in which, alas, millions of the former citizens of the well-ordered and prosperous Hapsburg monarchy now suffer, as Mr. Winston Churchill has so aptly put it, "the tortures which ancient poets and theologians reserved for the damned."

The late Jan Masaryk, son of the most pertinacious enemy of the Hapsburgs and founder of the Czechoslovak republic, confessed in 1946 to Sir Duff Cooper, then British Ambassador in Paris (see Daily Telegraph, London, April 18, 1950) that "Czechoslovakia had never been so happy as when forming part of the Hapsburg empire." What a shattering confession! It is astonishing that there are still people who dare to contradict it.

Postal Service Cut

Members of the Natrona County Women's Democratic Club have voted to place themselves on record as opposed to the recent ruling of the Postoffice Department which proposes to effect economies in the department administration by reducing mail service.

We are definitely in favor of economy in all the departments of Government, but we feel that it is an unwise measure to take away employment and that with a little thought, other ways could be found to economize.

Members particularly favor an increase in the rates of second-class mail and all forms of mailing which cover such things as direct-mail advertising, which is reaching such proportions as to constitute an abuse of the low mail-rate privileges.

An expenditure at the present time for modern bookkeeping machines, and a general overhauling of the antiquated bookkeeping and administration methods of postoffices would, over a period of time, bring about a sizable saving in the expense of the department. Further economy could be achieved by a very small reduction in the salaries of the employes in the highest brackets where it would not be apt to work a hardship.

The club feels that a reduction in mail service is a poor solution of the problem, and that the administrators of the Postoffice should be capable of working out more constructive measures.

Genocide Convention

Your June 10 editorial, "Cornerstone of Law" is both correct and timely. Genocide, which is defined in the United Nations Convention as intentional destruction of national, religious, ethnic and racial groups, was not easily understood by some Americans because this crime does not happen here.

According to international law, the legislative history of a treaty is binding for its interpretation. This history clearly reveals that genocide is a mass crime of great dimensions. The basic resolution of the General Assembly of 1946 says that "genocide is a denial of the right of existence of entire human groups as homicide is the denial of the right of existence of an individual." Attempts to extend the concept of genocide to individuals were defeated in the General Assembly of the United Nations.

After Senate hearings on genocide which displayed an overwhelming support for the convention, the McMahon subcommittee recommended ratification with several "understandings." One "understanding" explains that this country will be bound by such an interpretation of genocide when the intent to destroy is directed against all the inhabitants of a country of the same religion, race and national origin, although only a substantial part of these groups is affected. This "understanding" adequately preserves and clarifies the position of the United States in relation to other nations.

The only occasion when American courts will have to deal with genocide would apply to situations when genocide offenders from other countries would seek refuge here and would have to be extradited under this convention. Obviously, on this convention as in other matters pertaining to international crimes, the Federal courts will have jurisdiction.

The Genocide Convention was also mistaken several times as a treaty which is self-executing and would become automatically binding in American law without additional legislation. An analogy with the U. N. Charter in the California case was significantly hinted at. However, it is clear that the Genocide Convention is not self-executing since it contains Article V which requires the enactment of implementing legislation, in accordance with the American Constitution. Moreover, since the Genocide Convention deals with crime, it cannot go into effect until a special act of Congress has defined this crime and established the penalty.

"Fetish Of Freedom"

As a result of your June 14 editorial several people have written me requesting a clarification of the excerpts you printed from my remarks at our 151st commencement.

Freedom, as I see it, is our human choice to say what we think is true rather than false; to do what we hold to be good rather than evil. Intelligence decides the former, conscience the latter. The educator's task is to sharpen a student's intelligence and assist him in setting up moral standards for his conscience. In America, one of these standards has traditionally been considered basic to our way of life. That is the existence of God. From this accepted fact flows our human rights, which we claim are God-given, not state-given. Remove God and the structure of our American system collapses.

As an American educator, therefore—my religious beliefs quite apart—I feel duty-bound to maintain the existence of God as an important intellectual, moral and political factor and so to teach or see that it is taught in my school. Since the current interpretation of academic freedom permits a professor to teach that God does not exist, I, as an American, raised my voice in protest.

I called this interpretation of academic freedom a fetish because I think it is used as a sacred protection by an alarming number of professors who, consciously or unconsciously, are undermining our American way of life. I felt that was sufficient justification to request a limitation of academic freedom; a limitation, please note, not based on the dogma of any religious faith but on a reasonable American tradition.

It would be instructive for your editorial writer to thumb through a good history and find out why Galileo was condemned. The modern heliocentric system was discovered by Copernicus, a Roman Catholic priest, who, incidentally, was not condemned.

Byrd's Party In A Party

By Marquis Childs

Veto Of Hutchinson

ON ANY list of the most influential men in Washington the name of Senator Harry F. Byrd would come fairly high up. For purposes of listing, the Senator is a Democrat. Actually, he is the head of a party of his own, and any resemblance to the Democratic Party of President Truman is purely coincidental.

Byrd's power is yet another reminder of how meaningless our political labels have become today. Nor does the Dixiecrat tag fit the Byrd party.

Its origins go a long way back of that. They go back to Thomas Jefferson and the kind of squirearchy that some of his adulators believe Jefferson envisioned for this Nation. Harry Byrd is a Virginia squire on a twentieth century scale. His power rests, in part, in the prestige that tradition still has in the era of mass production and atomic war.

If Senator Byrd's power is largely negative, it is nevertheless real. He has just demonstrated it by vetoing the President's appointment of Martin A. Hutchinson to be a member of the Federal Trade Commission at a salary of $15,000 a year.

There are special aspects of this use of the Byrd veto power, since Hutchinson not only comes from Virginia, but in 1948 ran against the Senator for the senatorial nomination. If he cares to, a Senator may declare a nominee from his home State to be personally obnoxious to him, and under the rules of the club, that is almost sufficient to block his confirmation.

But Byrd did not do that in this instance. In a letter to the Senate Commerce Committee, considering Hutchinson's nomination, he said that the nominee lacked training, experience and competence for the position.

CONTRARY to the legend of the tight control exercised by the Byrd machine in Virginia, there are frankly expressed differences on this point. Virginia's attorney general, J. Lindsay Almond, jr., one of the ranking members of the Byrd organization, indorsed Hutchinson, praising him for his "sincerity, honesty, manifest courage of conviction and devotion to duty," and predicting that he would "acquit himself most creditably in the faithful discharge of the duties which may be incumbent upon him." Others in the Virginia hierarchy praised the abilities of the President's nominee.

But it does not appear likely he will exercise those abilities in a Federal office. The Commerce Committee reported on the Hutchinson appointment unfavorably, by a vote of 5 to 3. Unless something unforseen occurs, the Senate as a whole is expected to follow this lead if there is a vote on Hutchinson.

Byrd's friends believe that in naming Hutchinson, the President intended a direct slap at their hero. There is no doubt of the President's intense dislike and resentment of the vetoing Virginian. A favorite Truman theme aired to visitors with salty Missouri expletives is Byrd's political iniquity. Relayed to the public on at least one occasion, this has helped to fan the feud.

BUT IF the testimonials to Hutchinson are even partly true, then Byrd's action must also be put down to political spleen. Last year Byrd succeeded in blocking a Truman nominee—Mon C. Wallgren, former Governor of the State of Washington, and the President's close friend, named to be chairman of the National Security Resources Board. But, in that instance, many shared the doubt as to Wallgren's ability to hold such a post.

Byrd's specialty, and the source of his great popularity with business audiences, is economy. He has performed a valuable service in pointing out waste, duplication and inefficiency in the Government.

But economy can be a two-edged sword when peace or war, survival or chaos, turn so largely on the responsibility focused in Washington. To cripple the State Department and the Voice of America with an arbitrary slash would be to risk far more than we have the right to risk.

Some weeks ago Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota introduced a resolution to abolish the Byrd Committee on Non-Essential Federal Expenditures because it seemed to duplicate the work of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, and therefore to constitute in itself a waste of time and money. The prestige of the Virginia squire was demonstrated when the Republican-Southern Democrat coalition descended on Humphrey like a ton of bricks. And, significantly, no one on his own side of the aisle rose in his defense. Here is a party within a party and, in a sense, a government within a government.

"Anti-Noise

When my husband and I moved back East we bought a house in what we thought was a quiet suburb near Washington, but now that we have to keep our windows open we have discovered our mistake. We take barking dogs, airplanes, etc., in our stride, but several times a day a church nearby plays canned chimes for 15 minutes at a stretch.

One of our thoughtful neighbors installed a floodlight last summer in his yard so that he could play croquet all night. This year he has added a loud speaker.

What is the solution? Move away, buy an air-conditioning unit and shut all the windows for the summer or form an anti-noise society? Are there any joiners?

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

House, Hopkins, And Harriman

THE PRESIDENT'S decision to have in the White House a special assistant in foreign affairs is wise, and Mr. Harriman is well suited to the post. He is not an orator, and publicly he is not very articulate. That would be a disadvantage if he were the Secretary of State. It is for this post almost an essential qualification. For the President's closest adviser should never make speeches or be interviewed. Anything he might be tempted to say the President himself ought to say. If the President cannot say it, it should not be said at all.

Lippmann

Mr. Harriman will bring into the high councils of the Administration something which, curiously enough, is for the time being not there—some direct and intimate understanding of foreign countries. Mr. Acheson himself has a long and deep experience of foreign affairs—but only as conducted from Washington. The State Department is, I believe, an enormously more competent, a more hard working and a more dedicated body of men than it has ever been before. But Mr. Webb and the principal Assistant Secretaries, many of whom are very able and most promising, have little or no actual foreign experience in Europe, where we have our principal allies, and in Russia, our great rival.

MR. TRUMAN has been learning the hard way that the President cannot delegate the conduct of foreign affairs, no matter how eminent and able the Secretary of State may be. Only the President in the White House has the power, can bear the responsibility, and exert the influence which the shaping of high policy and the high command in executing policy require. But the man who is the President has not the time and the energy to do all that himself directly. So he must have with him inside the White House someone whom he trusts absolutely. His relations with that man have to be personal rather than official. For that man must be able to listen for him and to speak for him, to do a lot of thinking for him, and indeed to get a lot of thinking, which could not pass through a bureaucracy, done for the President.

THIS IS how Wilson came, one might fairly put it, to invent Colonel House. The office is unknown to the Constitution. Yet it can be very powerful indeed, as was the case with Colonel House until the estrangement from Wilson, as was the case with Harry Hopkins until Roosevelt's death, when the two men hit it off well.

But the power of a House and a Hopkins is reflected. It stems not from an election or from a formal appointment that is ratified by the Senate, but solely and entirely from the President's personal favor. This invites the opponents of the President and the enemies and the jealous rivals of the favorite to say that in a republic no man should have so much power which is derived from personal favor.

MR. TRUMAN must have felt that way before he became President, when he was still in Congress, and knew what they said about Hopkins in the cloakrooms. In any event he tried the other system. Not only did he move foreign affairs out of the White House and, as he supposed, back to the State Department where, theoretically, they belonged:—he moved the State Department itself so far away from the White House that instead of the casual and continual visiting to and fro, which was once the practice, it is now like a commuter deciding whether he needs to be in town to see the show or at home in the suburbs to mow the lawn.

Mr. Truman was widely acclaimed as the restorer of the constitutional system—with no Harry Hopkins in the White House and foreign affairs neatly deposited in the Department of State.

BUT THE facts of life were stronger than the theory. On the one hand Mr. Truman, like every other President, found himself depending on an intimate circle in the White House, not merely for comfort and human support but also because the President really needs more than one pair of eyes and ears, and has in his many powers and duties to be many men at once.

And on the other hand, foreign affairs, though deposited in the State Department, did not stay there. The Secretary of State was not powerful enough to keep control of them, and so the control disintegrated and large bits and pieces of it have been moved to the Treasury and to the Department of Commerce and the biggest piece of all to the Pentagon. In the Pentagon a very good, and a rather serious imitation of what in any other country but this free-wheeling democracy would be militarism—namely the military control of foreign policy—developed. In Congress not only did the bipartisan arrangement break down but the partisan Democratic support of the Administration's foreign policy became doubtful and even demoralized.

THE APPOINTMENT of Mr. Harriman means, we must assume, that the President has recognized that foreign affairs have to be conducted—especially in time of great decisions—from the White House. The great decisions have to be made there and transmitted as commands to all the departments and to all the services. It is impossible for the Secretary of State, be he Hull or Byrnes or Marshall or Acheson, to lead the Nation and the Congress and to manage and to control the military establishment and the other great and proud departments. The President, not merely Harry S. Truman personally but the great office alone, can do that.

Ohio's Democratic Governor Hints He May Vote for Taft

safe and get a car while the getting was good."

Confident We'll Win

Hoffman said the struggle between the United States and the Kremlin was on four fronts—the economic, the political, the informational, and the military. He explained the task on this last front was to have such great military strength as to prevent the Red army from marching.

He said he was completely confident the free world "will win out against the Kremlin."

Governor Lausche, a Democrat never noted for party regularity, made his surprising statement about the Taft-Ferguson contest in Ohio when a reporter asked him how he thought it would turn out.

"I think Joe Ferguson has been a good and fearless State auditor," he said. "I admire Bob Taft for his fearlessness and his forthrightness in taking positions in public office. My general predisposition would be to vote for the Democratic candidate."

Lausche, who is running for a third term as Governor, laughed at this point and said he hadn't heard as yet whether Taft or Ferguson was going to vote for him.

"You say that your general predisposition is to vote for the Democratic candidate," a reporter broke in to say, "what is your specific predisposition?"

"When I have determined the issues," said Lausche, "I will vote for the candidate I think will serve my Nation best. If I decide that's Ferguson, I'll vote for Ferguson. If I decide it's Taft, I'll vote for Taft. I won't allow my party's interests to overcome my interest in my country."

Lausche declined to predict the outcome of the Taft-Ferguson battle, but said it would be much closer than "the experts in the East and Washington have predicted."

Ohio political reporters who are covering the Governors' conference agreed with this, but said Taft was looked upon as a favorite. Lausche is said to feel that Taft holds an important role in American political life as a bold spokesman for the minority, and that it would be something of a tragedy if he should be voted out of office.

Another chief executive of a State added his voice today to the criticism leveled yesterday at Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), by Governors Earl Warren of California and James H. Duff of Pennsylvania.

Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey, a Republican, went after McCarthy for his methods in hunting Communists in the State Department.

"What is the best method?" he was asked.

"Personally," said Driscoll, "I don't think you should use a baseball bat as a surgical instrument."

He said he thought methods were just as important as objectives in the Communists-in-government controversy. He thought McCarthy had handicapped efforts to achieve the objective of uprooting Communists by "making sweeping charges that haven't stood up under public scrutiny."

Governor Driscoll said he didn't like to have people abroad pick up their newspapers and find out that the No. 1 country of the world was washing its dirty linen in public.

He said that, wrong though McCarthy's methods might be, many people thought they were justified. They thought so, he said, because they were convinced that the Administration was reluctant to make public all the facts and that therefore it was necessary for somebody to "pry" them loose.

Driscoll said he thought that, politically, McCarthy's charges had been more helpful than harmful to the Republicans. He joined with Governor Warren in advocating creation of a commission to look into the charges of Communists in Government. He said such a commission should be made up of distinguished Americans of both parties and should be given all the facts by the Administration.

FRANK J. LAUSCHE
. . . May support Taft

Secretary of State Acheson is to join the Governors here at the Greenbrier Tuesday and take part in a round-table discussion on foreign affairs. The indications are he may be asked some pointed questions about McCarthy's charges about Communists in the State Department.

ECA Administrator Hoffman flew down from Washington today in an Army plane, landing on the Greenbrier airport at 5 p. m. In his speech tonight, he said that one of the best ways to prevent the Red Army from marching was to carry through on the North Atlantic Pact.

"We are spending over one billion dollars a year on that program," he said, "and it is worth every dime—both to Europeans and to us. For the same measures that insure the safety of Frankfurt, Coventry and Lille are the measures that also give defense to Kalamazoo, Mich., and Keokuk, Iowa."

Hoffman then went on to tell why he was convinced the free world will win out against the Kremlin. He listed the great success of the Marshall Plan in bringing about a rebirth of Europe, the tremendous advantages the United States and its friends have in material resources, and finally the human factors.

"The strength of any nation is the strength of individuals who make it up," he said. "Under the lash of the dictator, men do not grow strong. They shrink. Here in the sunlight of democratic freedom, men grow and expand their energies and surge forward. It has been truly said that the strength of 1000 free men is many times that of 1000 slaves."

Hoffman said the free world can make effective use of its resources only if it remains united.

"While I'm on that subject," he said, "let's take stock of things and admit that we face a very dangerous column here at home. I'm not talking about the fifth column, either. Dangerous as their treachery can be, American Communists are pretty well discredited. I'm talking of the sixth column—those people who would spread dissension, disunity and doubt."

Hoffman said the tensions between Russia and her satellites were constantly being tautened, and he foresaw the possibility of other satellites breaking away like Yugoslavia.

"Once the Communist world starts to crack," he said, "it can disintegrate very rapidly indeed."

If the free world does win out, he said in conclusion, the next 50 years would be even more fruitful than the last 50.

Corporation Taxes Raised

ponent of the cut, had sought for weeks to reverse it. A statement issued last night by Edward F. Ragland, executive secretary of the Associated Tobacco Manufacturers, charged Doughton had "clouded" the cigarette tax issued.

Said Ragland:

"We (economy brand manufacturers) have suffered only a temporary defeat, solely because the committee chairman had such a deep personal interest in the outcome that he brought extraordinary pressure to bear upon a sufficient number of committee members to win by a majority of but one vote."

The decision to lift corporate taxes by 433 million dollars crossed the last big hurdle delaying the tax bill, but staff spokesmen said the committee still must vote on a number of relatively minor details before the measure is reported.

Indications are the bill will be formally reported later this week in time for House action before the end of the month.

Democratic leaders, who until recently despaired of Congress' passing any bill the President would sign, suddenly took an optimistic line on its prospects.

At Least Provides Balance

After a congressional "Big Four" huddle at the White House, both Speaker Rayburn and Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) predicted both houses will pass an "acceptable" bill before adjournment.

What brightened the bill's prospects was the committee's decision to at least "balance" the perviously approved 1,100,000,000-dollar tax cut with new revenue. Mr. Truman requested something more than a balance, providing moderate additional revenue, but let it be known he wouldn't veto an offset.

Unitil yesterday the committee was still 535 million dollars shy of enough doophole-plugging revenue to offset the big cut in excises on such things as jewelry, furs, baby lotions, telephone calls and a wide range of other items.

Reversal of the "economy brand" cigarette cut picked up 90 million dollars more revenue, reducing the "shortage" to 445 million dollars, staff experts said. The corporate tax increase all but wiped out the remaining loss.

Samples of Tax Changes

The proposed 21-percent normal tax on the first $25,000 of corporate earnings, and 20-percent surtax on the remainder, would affect companies in a few sample income tax brackets as wollows:

Company earnings	Present tax	Committee tax
$10,000	$2200	$2100
$25,000	$5750	$5250

Miller to Head Safe Deposit Group in D. C.

By S. Oliver Goodman

Claude Miller of American Security & Trust Co. is slated to become chairman of the safe deposit section of the D. C. Bankers Association at the annual meeting tonight in the Mayflower.

Miller

Miller is manager of the safe deposit department at the main branch of A.S. & T. and has been associated with the institution since 1931. He is a native of Baltimore County, Md., but attended local schools and Benjamin Franklin University. He is also a graduate of the American Institute of Banking.

Frederick J. Burrell of National Savings & Trust Co. is the uncontested candidate for section vice chairman and John L. Cain of Washington Loan & Trust is scheduled to move up to secretary-treasurer.

Two will be elected to the executive council out of a panel of 12 candidates. Mrs. Burdette H. Monroe of Union Trust Co., retiring chairman, will become an ex-officio member of the executive council.

VEPCO NET: Virginia Electric & Power Co. reported net income of $8,928,457 for the 12 months ended May 31, equal to $1.90 a common share. This compared with $6,404,109 or $1.49 a share in the previous 12 months. Net in May totaled $812,460, against $570,774 in the same 1949 period.

NEW OWNER: Vncent A. Sheehy, jr., has acquired ownership of Handley Ford Inc., one of the largest Ford dealerships in the Washington area, it was announced yesterday. Sheehy has been a partner and general manager of Banning & Sheehy, Dodge-Plymouth dealers in Hyattsville, Md. Sheehy said that personnel of the Handley firm, 3730 Georgia ave., will continue as before with the exception of Curtis W. Handley who has retired.

OFFERING SOLD: All of the 30,000 additional preferred shares of Washington Gas Light Co. have been sold and the books closed, the underwriter reported last night. The $4.25 preferred issue was offered to the public at $103 a share, same price at which it was originally offered to the company's common stockholders. The latter subscribed to 4502 shares, leaving 26,098 shares for the public offering.

ODD LOTS: Steel output rate this week is estimated at 101.2 percent of rated capacity, marking the 10th succesive week of operations at 100 percent or above . . . Class One railroads reported operating revenues in May averaged 1.9 percent below the same 1949 month. Eastern roads showed a 6.4 percent decrease . . . National Steel Corp. plans to expand facilities at a cost in excess of 25 million dollars . . . New York Cotton

New York, June 19 (AP).—Cotton futures were under pressure of liquidation and hedging today and closed 25 to 85 cents a bale lower. The market started off steady, but after gains of 30 to 65 cents a bale were reached a flurry of selling dropped prices about $1 a bale from top levels. Thereafter rallies were small and feeble.

No Relief in Sight for Newsprint Shortage

By The Associated Press

A House committee, told by one newspaper spokesman that United States publishers are being "punished by unreasonable newsprint prices," heard yesterday that no solution is in sight for a growing paper shortage.

A number of witnesses testified that the demand for newsprint has jumped sharply since the war, that indications are it will continue to grow, and that production in Canada—the chief United States source—is not keeping pace.

John H. Perry, president of the Western Newspaper Union, told the House group that "excessive prices for newsprint" will force expansion of an infant newsprint industry in the South and Southwest.

Agreements Charged

Perry said there is a firm agreement among Canadian producers of newsprint—the paper on which newspapers are published—to fix prices and split up the United States into zones with each zone assigned to one manufacturer.

Perry and other industry spokesmen appeared as a House Judiciary Subcommittee headed by Representative Celler (D., N. Y.) opened two weeks of hearings on the newsprint situation. The group is studying industries in which it thinks there may be monopolies. It recently completed hearings on the steel industry.

Celler has said the current hearings are designed to determine "whether present or threatened (newsprint) shortages result from any violation of existing antitrust laws or any world-wide cartels."

While the committee would have no influence on foreign firms—those of Canada, for instance—it could recommend legislation that would prevent United States business participation in any international arrangement to split up world markets.

Perry, of the Western Newspaper Union, said in that connection that it is a mistake to hold Canadian interests solely responsible for the present situation.

He declared that dollar for dollar, United States interest is as great as Canadian interest in the Canadian industry.

Appraisals of the current newsprint scarcity came also from Cranston Williams, general manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and from William F. Canfield, manager of the Inland Daily Press Association.

Heavy Use of Newsprint

Williams said United States newspapers are using up newsprint faster than they can get it. He saw no signs of a slackening demand.

"At the end of May," he said, "stocks of newsprint in the hands of publishers reporting to our association were down to an average of 30 days' supply. The average at the end of May for the past 10 years was 40 days' supply."

Canfield said more than one-half of his Inland Association's 432 members have circulations of less than 10,000 and are especially vulnerable to paper shortages because they buy through jobbers. Many larger papers have contracts with Canadian producers.

Under questioning by Celler and Representative Keating (R., N. Y.) Perry said the Justice Department brought an antitrust conspiracy suit against the newsprint industry in 1947 but that all records were removed to Canada.

He said a Federal court in New York found evidence of conspiracy, but refused to sustain the charges without documentary proof. Celler said this Government halted efforts to subpena the records when the Canadian government objected.

It Says the Nicest Things About You!

There are few stronger urges in the human breast than that which grows out of the desire to stand well among our fellow beings.

And around this great basic emotion lies much of the appeal of a Cadillac car.

Alight from your Cadillac anywhere you will, in the presence of people, and certain splendid deductions are immediately made about you.

It could not be otherwise—for the wonderful people who own this car have made it so. In every community in America, a preponderant proportion of the leading citizens have long since turned to Cadillac.

Out of this close association, the car has partaken of the character of its owners until it has now become their symbol. It is recognized throughout the world as the all but automatic companion to outstanding personal success.

The genesis of all this, of course, is quality. For almost fifty years, Cadillac cars have been built to the highest standards it is practical to enforce in the production of a motor car. And people of achievement and discernment have sought them out as inevitably as water seeks its level.

Today, Cadillac stands uniquely alone in the things it reflects upon its owner. It all but writes his biography!

* * * *

Have you thought of a Cadillac car for yourself? If so, why not come in some day, quite soon, and talk it over?

We think you'd be surprised and delighted at how easy and practical it has now become to join the wonderful people who own and drive this wonderful car.

Cheating Charged

In other personnel developments, 10 persons here, of whom six are former Federal workers, are threatened with criminal prosecution on charges of cheating on Civil Service examinations.

They are accused of impersonation; of taking Civil Service examinations in place of persons who applied for them. The impersonations took place here in the recent clerk and messenger tests. Such actions are classed as felonies and are punishable by either fine, imprisonment, or both.

At the same time, the commission revealed that 11 Houston, Texas, postal employes had been fired and barred from Federal service for at least three years on impersonation charges. In addition, four former employes and four other persons have been blackballed from Government for the same length of time on identical charges.

Two Chicago postal employes were sentenced to a year each on probation on similar charges. Their case was taken to court.

Civil Service is fingerprinting applicants for mass examinations here now to prevent impersonations. Several of its regional offices also have adopted the foolproof practice.

The National Association of Retired Civil Employes reelected Elmer Johnson as president, and Lewis H. Fisher as vice president at its first convention here. Also named were Emory P. Thompson secretary and Ernest G. Dodge, given authority to appoint five vice presidents outside this city.

The group, which has leaped from 7000 to 45,000 members in the past year or so, voted to raise its dues from $1.50 to $2 a year and to limit active membership to employes retired from either the Federal or District governments. It voted to ask Congress to exempt Civil Service pensions from Federal income taxes, and to allow retired employes who have more than 35 years of service to recompute their annuities under the more liberal Langer-Chavez Act of April 1, 1948.

Compromise On Rent Bill

House-Senate conferees yesterday agreed on a six-month extension of Federal rent controls with a "local option" provision permitting cities to extend the curbs another six months.

Both branches of Congress still must approve the measure. The House must act first, possibly today. The measure does not affect the District of Columbia, slated to be covered under separate legislation, or nearby Virginia, already decontrolled by action of the State legislature.

The conference version is expected to meet with little opposition in either house, and there is every indication the completed bill will be on President Truman's desk well before June 30, when the present law expires.

Although the measure falls far short of President Truman's original demand for a one-year extension and strengthening of the present law, there was little doubt on Capitol Hill that he would sign it.

The December 31, 1950, termination date for controls in communities that do not take positive action to extend them through June 30, 1951, was contained in a bill that the Senate passed a week ago.

The following day, the House approved a bill calling for seven months of controls, with another optional five months for areas that wanted them.

This action brought a new filibuster threat from Senator Cain (R., Wash.), the most vocal Senate opponent of rent controls. One of his speeches during Senate debate on the bill lasted more than 12 hours.

The conferees assigned to work out a compromise agreed yesterday to accept the Senate dates.

At the same time, they accepted a House provision to give counties the right to remove controls before December 31. Cities and towns now have that authority.

The question of control for Silver Spring and Bethesda, Md., came in for discussion in the conference. Drafters had found a loophole that omits these big suburban areas from the local option feature of the national bill. They are omitted because they are under a county government, and are not incorporated—and the local option feature of the bill applies to incorporated cities, towns, and villages, but not to counties.

County officials took a look at this problem last week, and found the county would have access to at least five months of local-option rent control in 1951 under a State stand-by law. This could be used by the county government to continue controls for Silver Spring and Bethesda to June 1, 1951. Until the end of this year, they would be protected by Federal control.

10 Ousted at St. Louis Center Not Labeled Red, Officer Says

LIEUT. COL. INNES RANDOLPH
. . . Testifies at probe

Lieut. Col. Innes Randolph of the United States Army Intelligence testified yesterday that some of 10 persons fired from the Army's St. Louis Finance Center as "security risks" might be regarded as Communist travelers.

But he said they were not regarded as actual Communists.

Randolph gave his testimony before a House Armed Service subcommittee that is looking into reports of alleged Communist infiltration into the Army center.

The committee, headed by Representative Kilday (D., Tex.) resumed its hearings after a two-week recess.

Randolph helped carry out the "cleanup" operation that the Army itself has been conducting at the center. He is G-2 executive officer of the Fifth Army, Chicago.

The Army officer read into the record a statement by Assistant Secretary of the Army Karl Bendetsen saying it was "unfortunate" that the 10 ousted workers had been cited in previous testimony as Reds.

Bendetsen's statement drew a quick protest from Representative Elston (R., Ohio).

Declaring he saw no reason for Bendetsen's comment, Elston said Maj. Gen. Eugene M. Foster, chief of Army Finance, had agreed with him.

The committee also heard William F. McCarty and Wesley J. Gallagher, representatives of International Business Machines, deny they had made any misleading or unfounded statements to discredit an informant's charges of communism at the center.

Frank Erickson Pleads Guilty to 60 Counts

will be under five years. Editor's Note.]

There were reports that Erickson pleaded guilty in hopes of lessening his punishment, and to protect his wealthy betting customers from exposure in court.

Several New York businessmen, some of whom bet up to $15,000 a day, testified before the closed sessions of the grand jury that brought charges against Erickson. Some of the bettors were scheduled to be called as trial witnesses.

At his arraignment early this month, Erickson had pleaded innocent. The changed plea came at the scheduled start of his trial.

Hogan said all available information about Erickson's activity would be turned over to a Senate subcommittee investigating Nation-wide gambling, or to interested law-enforcement agencies.

Last May 1, District Attorney investigators raided Erickson's plush Park ave. offices and seized a truckload of records.

These showed transactions in a far-flung gambling empire, and links between Erickson and some of the Nation's top underworld figures, Hogan said.

Told of Netting $100,000 Yearly

The raid came after Erickson had candidly admitted to the Senate committee on April 28 that he netted $100,000 profits annually from an illegal Nation-wide, $12,500,000-a-year bookmaking business.

The seized documents were submitted to the grand jury over protests of Erickson's counsel. Hogan said they showed that Erickson's central headquarters for accepting bets was in Cliffside, N. J.

They also revealed, Hogan said, a Nation-wide tie-in with other bookies over the country, from whom Erickson accepted "lay-off bets," or bets insuring the bookies against excessively heavy losses.

Names of some of the reputed big-shots in the underworld—Joe Adonis of Brooklyn and New Jersey; Meyer and Jake Lansky and Vincent (Jimmy Blue Eyes) Alo, of Florida, and alleged members of Detroit's "Purple Gang"—also cropped up in the records.

Jilted John Jachym Selling His Holdings in Nats

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

CHICAGO, JUNE 19—At long last, a nice guy and a whale of a ball player is getting his due. Perhaps you've noticed that the man who is polling the most votes for the American League's All-Star team is Georgie Kell, Detroit's third baseman.

POVICH

This year, Kell is the nearest thing to a unanimous choice in the All-Star voting. In his own league, he's running far ahead of Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio. He's pulling more votes, too, than the National League big-shots, Stan Musial and Jackie Robinson. It's a special kind of tribute for a ball player who isn't known as a home run specialist.

There was some astonishment when Kell wound up as the American League batting champion last year by a fraction of a percentage point over Ted Williams, thanks to his three hits on the last day of the season. He wasn't supposed to be a hitter in Williams' class, but there he was on top at the finish. And just to demonstrate it was no accident, there he is out in front again this year, hitting .384 and nearly 20 points ahead of his nearest rival, Walt Dropo of the Red Sox. What the Kell does a guy have to do to prove he is no flash in the pan?

AL EVANS, the Washington catcher, was talking about Kell the other day. "I don't know what to do to get him out," said Evans. "He's always ready for everything you pitch him."

Evans declared he'd rather see Williams, DiMaggio, Berra, anybody come up to the plate than Kell. "That Kell starts swinging from the time he comes out of the batter's circle," he said. "He isn't interested in bases on balls or anything like that. He just wants to hit that ball, and he always has his wood on it."

There actually shouldn't have been any great surprise last season when Kell wound up with Williams' batting title. When Connie Mack picked Kell out of the minors at Lancaster, Pa., before the war, the fellow was already a man of distinction. It wasn't much of a league he was playing in, but one thing he could boast, with his .390 average that year, he outhit every other batter in the United States.

IF THE PHILADELPHIA Athletics are suffering financial pains because of their collapse into the cellar, and Connie Mack is now being faced with the necessity of selling his franchise, the Kell story is a pretty good tie-in with Mack's troubles. Kell, it seems, was Connie's greatest mistake.

You'd have to say that Mr. Mack made the worst deal in modern baseball history a few years back when, in some kind of a seizure, he dealt off Kell to the Tigers in an even swap for Barney McCosky. For Kell, he was getting a weak-armed outfielder whose high batting average never was a real index to his value. The Tigers were getting a man who became perhaps the league's best ball player.

To offset this mistake in the Kell deal, Connie had to go out and pay the Browns more than $100,000 for Bob Dillinger. That, too, was a blow to the A's cashbox, and apparently another mistake inasmuch as Mr. Mack has also been trying to unload Dillinger to the Pirates in an attempt to get his money back. Had the A's kept Kell, they wouldn't be in the cellar, certainly wouldn't be financially-stricken.

IN THE ALL-STAR voting, Kell has another distinction. In company with Bobby Doerr, who is leading in the voting for the American League second base job, Kell is the only player who deserves election on both a hitting-fielding basis. He's the best of the American League third sackers defensively.

Walt Dropo, who tops the voting for the first basemen, rates somewhere behind Gordon Goldsberry, Ferris Fain, Eddie Robinson and Mickey Vernon as a fielder. Phil Rizzuto, topping the shortstops, isn't as good a fielder as the White Sox's Alphonse Carrasquel. Yogi Berra, leading the catchers, can't carry Joe Hegan's mitt as a receiver.

And in the outfield, where Williams, Larry Doby and Hoot Evers are the top three in the American League voting, they're making it chiefly on their batting averages. Joe and Dom DiMaggio and Johnny Groth surpass the top trio defensively. But Kell is that rare guy who qualifies on two counts—the best fielder at his position, and the best hitter in the whole league.

Chisox Beat Hudson, 4-3, On Rickert's Blast in 11th

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Chicago, June 19.—Marvin Rickert rifled a home run into the right field seats at the start of the White Sox's eleventh inning and finished off the Nats tonight 4 to 3.

He was the same guy who led off the White Sox ninth with a single that inspired their tying run at that point, and his eleventh inning swing against Sid Hudson was full of distrust of the Sox's ability to get him home again by easy stages.

Hudson went all the way but it was back in the ninth that he fluffed a 3-2 victory with his failure to protect his lead. A bunt that was messed up by Hudson and Eddie Yost figured in the tying run and eventually Nelson Fox got it home with a fly ball.

Mele, Robinson Homer

The White Sox outhomered the Nats, 2-1. Sam Mele banged one into the upper deck of left field in the fourth to tie the game at 1-1, and in the same inning Eddie Robinson swatted a homer into right field to untie the score at 2-1.

Hudson himself singled to knock in the run that gave him the 3-2 lead the Nats couldn't hold in the ninth. Otherwise, the Nats weren't hitting much. Only seven hits off young Bob Cain, Ray Scarborough and Randy Gumpert. Winning pitcher Gumpert held 'em hitless in the last two innings.

The Nats were battling for a run in the top of the eleventh when Michaels walked and stole second with two out, but first-baseman Gordon Goldsberry flattended 'em with a leaping one-hand catch of Evans' line drive.

Mele Really Connects

The Sox wrenched a 1-0 lead out of Hudson in the third when little Nelson Fox opened up with a two-bagger to left. Two outs later, Dave Philley singled to left scoring Fox. The damage was halted at one run when Ostrowski's throw nipped Philley's attempt to stretch his hit.

Eddie Yost's single was the only Washington hit off young Bob Cain for three innings, and then in the fourth Sam Mele suddenly tied the score with their second hit—his fourth homer of the year.

Mele's blow was a tremendous smash into the left field upper deck.

Their old frat member, Eddie Robinson, put the Nats behind, 2-1, in the fourth by banging a Hudson pitch on a line into the lower deck of right field for his third homer of the year.

The contest rocked along at that 2-1 figure until the seventh when, with one out, the Nats suddenly mustered four hits in a row to come up with two important runs.

A pair of former White Sox, Cass Michaels and Johnny Ostrowski, launched the rally with singles to

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Washington area track fans are going to get a look at what will probably be the "greatest AAU meet of all time" at Byrd Stadium at the University of Maryland next Friday and Saturday.

That's the opinion of Peyton Jordan, head coach of Occidental College at Los Angeles, here for the games with a glittering group of track and field stars.

"I think the AAU will be better than the Olympics," he said. "College performances this year have been the best ever.

"And this weather here," he went on happily, "it's perfect. Good and warm. The boys are all limber and in great shape. It loosens 'em up. The people'll see a great show.

"Just take a look at the sprinters, for example," he said. "There's Lloyd La Beach, the world's best sprinter in the 100 and 220 events. He does the 100 in 9.4 and the 220 in 20.2. But Occidental's Walt McKibben and California's Don Anderson will give him a great run.

"Then there's Herb McKenley, the world's champion quarter miler, who resumes his dramatic duels with our Bill Parker.

"Parker and McKenley have raced twice this year and each has won once, neither by more than three inches. McKenley's world record time is 46 seconds flat, but he and Parker may both beat it this weekend.

"In the half mile, Mal Whitfield, the Olympic champion, formerly with Ohio State, will clash with John Barnes of Occidental who ran the fastest half mile in the Nation, 1.51.1, a few weeks ago Bill Brown of Morgan State, the NCAA champ, Bob Chambers of USC, and Len Truex of Ohio State, are all great performers."

"The is going to be a great show. Illinois' Jack Twomey will be back to defend his title. Chief Newcomb of USC, the full-blooded Shawnee Indian who runs like Jim Thorpe; Occidental's Bob McMillan, and George Wade of Yale will stage a four-way duel for the championship.

"USC will bring the finest high hurdler in the United States in Dick Attlesey. He's currently the unofficial world record holder for the 120 high hurdles, 13.5 seconds, clipping a tenth of a second off

Bucs Beat Braves, 1-0, Chambers Hurls 4-Hitter

Boston, June 19 (AP).—Lefthander Cliff Chambers handcuffed the Boston Braves with four hits tonight as he hurled the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 1-0 shutout over the Braves in the replay of yesterday's second game 8-8 tie.

Chambers and Boston First Baseman Earl Torgeson briefly tussled in the third inning after Torgeson was grounded by a close pitch. Torgeson rushed the Buc hurler but the two were separated by the umpires and players before a blow could be exchanged.

Torgeson was ejected from the game.

'Just an Ache'

Joe Page Has Sore Shoulder

Cleveland, June 19 (AP).—Joe Page, the New York Yankees' relief pitching ace, said today he has an ailment in his shoulder which he "can't shake."

The fireman said the ailment popped up on May 28 in Philadelphia when he saved the first game of a doubleheader but lost the second.

"It's not what you'd call a pain but an ache that I just can't shake," the champions' World Series hero added. "I had some trouble for a while last year but it disappeared. So far, no dice."

Page said his shoulder hurt particularly when he reached the top of his windup.

The reliever has appeared in six games since May 28.

Kid Gavilan Wins

Hartford, Conn., June 19 (AP).—Kid Gavilan, the Cuban middleweight, outpointed Bobby Mann of Trenton, N. J., tonight in a 10-round feature bout in the Hartford Auditorium's ourdoor arena. Gavilan weighed 155; Mann 154.

Hybla Valley Racing Tonight

Little Joe Jernigan, speedy Norfolk, Va., stock car driver, will headline tonight's card at Hybla Valley Speedway beginning at 8:30 p. m.

Jernigan won last week's feature. Ken Marriott, Baltimore, Md., pilot who snapped an 18-race winning streak of Jernigan's at Richmond, will be on the card tonight.

The only woman stock racer to appear in this part of the country, Pauline Heston will compete on the regular card against the men.

Gabe Murphy, Former Hoya, Reportedly Is New Buyer of Stock

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

John J. Jachym, frustrated 40 percent stockholder in the Washington Baseball Club, has decided to sell his $550,000 holdings to Gabe Murphy, local insurance broker and "warm personal friend" of Nats President Clark Griffith, reports last night indicated.

There was no confirmation from either Jachym, 31-year-old Jamestown, N. Y., sportsman who purchased the stock only last December, or Murphy, former graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown University.

Jachym could not be reached for comment while Murphy, seemingly excited but definitely uniformative, had only a terse and repeated "no comment, no comment."

Griffith said he had heard "rumblings' that Jachym, whom he has consistently denied an active part in the management of the team's affairs, would sell his stock.

"But I don't know anything about it," he added. "I do hope Murphy gets it. He's a warm personal friend of mine and a good man. That Jachym bunch is a mysterious outfit. They're a bunch of sharpshooters. They bought in to make a commission on a quick sale. They didn't call me when they bought the stock and I don't expect them to call me when they sell it."

Stockholders Meet Today

One report said the sale would be announced formally at today's meeting of the club's stockholders, but Griffith said if that was so he knew nothing of it.

"We have three meetings of the stockholders yearly, and tomorrow just happens to be one. It's just a coincidence that this thing popped up on the day before our meeting."

Friends of Murphy said they believed "there's enough money in the Murphy family to swing a deal like that."

But among other Washingtonians, men who have tried at one time or another to buy into the Nats, there was wide speculation as to whether Murphy was merely the head of a local group buying the stock or actually was seeking the stock on his own.

Frederick J. Ball, whom Jachym appointed his attorney when he bought the stock last December, said he had not heard of any sale "but it wouldn't surprise me. I know Griffith has been dickering for it ever since Jachym bought it." Ball had not been able to reach his client last night.

Attorneys Not Surprised

Griffith, who owns only 45 percent of the stock but has voting trusts which have enabled him to rule the organization, tried to buy the 40 percent interest from the Richardson estate last year. George Richardson, longtime business associate of Griffith's, was treasurer of the Nats until his death last year.

It was his holdings—some 7851 shares—which Jachym, with financial assistance from Hugh Grant of Bradford, Pa., purchased last December for $550,000.

Griffith was almost swept off his feet when he learned of the Jachym purchase. "I'm still in control," he said at the time, "and I'll still be the boss after the stockholders meet in January." He was correct on both counts.

The closest Jachym came to holding office with the Nats was the assistant treasureship created for Ball, his Washington attorney.

On the surface, relations between Griffith and Jachym appeared cordial, but it was common knowledge that Griffith resented (1) his own inability to buy the Richardson holdings and (2) Jachym's announcements that he'd like to take an active interest in the management of the team's affairs.

Jachym Goes Home

When Jachym was not made an active member of the Nats' inner family at last January's meeting of the stockholders, he returned to his Jamestown, N. Y., home. "I have no further comment," he said. "I want to remain friendly with Mr. Griffith."

That Jachym apparently had tired of his silent role was evident in a statement from his wife last night from Jamestown.

"I know John felt pretty bad about sitting in the background," she said, adding that "but I don't know anything about the sale of his stock. John left the house this morning and I haven't heard from him. I don't know where he is."

Colt Wins $5000 Trot 1st Time Out

The richest race ever staged either on a half-mile running or harness track in Maryland went last night to a first-time starter as some 6900 saw Irish Sweetheart, a 2-year-old by the great Phonograph, trot to an impressive half-length victory in the $5000 Washington Stakes at Laurel Raceway.

Completely overlooked in the wagering on the 13-horse field, Irish Sweetheart, owned by Bob Browne, jr., Baltimore sportsman, and driven by Clark McCoy, an eleventh-hour substitute for Frank Ervin, returned her backers a Ervin, returned her backers $27.80, $7 and $3.90.

McCoy gave Irish Sweetheart a masterful drive as he rated the easy racing little filly off the pace moving her from fourth at the first turn to second in the stretch and then to a burst of finishing speed to nose out Tornado Hanover, Octave Blake's entry.

The daily double paid $32.80 when Symbol Land, handled by Alan Myer, returned $8.40, $5.60, $4.40 in the first mile trot and Home Lady, Octave Blake's Little Brown Jug candidate number seven driven by Del Cameron took the second, a mile pace to bring her backers $7.60, $4.40, $3.20.

Singer Scores Ace at Sligo

All was sweet harmony at Sligo Public Golf Course yesterday as Sammy Seymour, a musician who heads a Washington night club trio, made a hole-in-one on the par 3, fourth hole, using an eight iron.

He and Carl Rotelli, a fellow musician, went to play a round at Sligo after a musicians' tourney at Indian Spring was cancelled because of bad weather.

Col. Wilson, Remell Lead

Col. Jim Wilson and Tech. Sergt. Eugene Remell took the lead in the Headquarters Command Air Force Golf Tournament yesterday at Fairfax Country Club.

Wilson and Remell led the 118-man field in the first half of a 36-hole qualifying round with 73 each. Col. Gen Schriever was third with 74 and Maj. Robert Swearingen was fourth with 77.

Walter Rawls, Norfolk Battler, Wins Intercity Boxing Trophy

Five knockouts featured the 12 bouts of the Georgetown Lions Club's first annual Intercity boxing show last night at Griffith Stadium.

Nine hundred fight fans endured a drizzling rain to see some fast punching between amateur fighters from Washington, Norfolk and Baltimore.

Norfolk's 126-pound Walter Rawls was awarded the trophy as the evening's outstanding fighter after he decisioned Washington's Bill Maxwell in a flashy fight.

Featherweight Paul Nicol of Washington, District AAU and Golden Gloves champ, one of the three local scrappers to win in the International Golden Gloves bouts here last August, won by a technical knockout from El Haislip of Baltimore.

Lyle Krueger of Norfolk outpointed Maurice Backey of Washington in the hardest fought battle of the evening. The two welterweights stood in the center of the ring and traded piston-like punches until the final bell.

140 POUNDS—Ralph Cantwell (W) outpointed Harvey Morris (W).

Speaking at Terps Clinic

Faurot Says There's No Secret to Split 'T,' It Helps the Undermanned Football Teams

Author Don Faurot, whose book "The Secret of th eSplit-T" is due this fall, let the cat out of the bag yesterday.

"Secret of the Split-T?" he hmmmed. "There's nothing at all secret about it, it's just a simple offense designed to help the undermanned team."

Faurot, head football coach at Missouri, should know whereof he speaks. He not only authored the Split-T book, but the Split-T offense as well.

Missouri plays three or four games each year with teams better equipped than we are," he told about 175 coaches assembled at Maryland University for the second annual coaching clinic. We weren't good enough to compete with them defensively so we had to try and outscore them. That's how we came up with the Split-T-formation, or the sliding-T-formation offense.

"It takes a lot of work off the lineman. They're spaced about a foot apart and by being split they create a hole automatically. With an opening already there and the defense spread, all the linemen must do in the Split-T is hold the hole a second.

"The big advantage is in the backfield. Where the other T formations must have a cracker-jack passer, it isn't necessary in our T. You show me a team which uses a T-formation, other than the Split-T, which doesn't have a topflight passer and I'll show you a losing team.

"The Split-T is a running offense. It drives the defense silly when the quarterback, who runs parallel to the line of scrimmage, suddenly pitches out to a halfback breaking by him. Or, if he sees the halfback is covered, he keeps the ball himself and cracks off tackle.

"We put it in at Missouri because we had a slew of fast, little backs who couldn't crack into the line or around end against our bigger opponents. The defense was massed against us. But when we spread our linemen, the defense opened up, too. There's no set defense against the Split-T because the opposition doesn't know what the quarterback is going to do with the ball.

"Then, too, instead of keeping the ball, the quarterback can also pitch out to the halfback, who in turn can throw a running pass when the defense is drawn in to stop an expected run.

"As far as I'm concerned, here's the real proof of the pudding. Ever since we put the offense in at Missouri we've been in the top ten in total offense each year except one.

"It's growing in popularity each year. We started it at Missouri in 1941. Now Maryland, Oklahoma, Alabama, Cornell, Virginia, and Georgia Tech, to name a few of the major teams, are using it.

"And they say that pro football is a passing game. Well, the Philadelphia Eagles run with the ball and gain most of their ground running on Split-T plays. That's good enough for me."

Having heard about the offensive wonders of the Split-T from an authority, the coaches today will hear how to stop it—from Jim Tatum, who's also well qualified. Tatum, who learned the system from Faurot, has never lost to a Faurot-coached team.

Fiery Rider Banned for Laran Foul

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Delaware Park, June 19.—Apprentice Jockey Joe Culmone, who rides strongly but not always wisely, was suspended for the remainder of the local meeting—13 racing days—the stewards announced today.

Culmone, sent to this country from shell-torn Italy during the war, was disciplined for "crossing over in the stretch, interfering with Laran." The race was the sixth last Saturday in which Tea-Maker, Culmone's mount, finished first by a length and a half but was disqualified with victory going to Laran.

The suspension of Culmone is the most severe handed out in a series of rulings against jockeys at this meeting. The crack apprentice begins his "time" tomorrow and will be unable to ride at any track until after the closing here on July 4.

Despite being a "bug boy" (one with weight allowances) Culmone has been either the leader or close up in jockey standings at various meetings. He is not a newcomer as far as suspensions are concerned. He was in hot water with officials consistently in Florida last winter.

However, Culmone has been popular with the racing public, many backing him each time he appeared on the track, regardless of the record of his mount.

Culmone finished out his final day with one winner to bring his season's total to 155. He is topping the Nation's jockeys despite his suspensions. His winner today was Circle M Farm's Eternal Son, $3.50 favorite, and gave him 19 for the local session. He leads Jack Robertson by seven winners.

William G. Helis' Ennobled, a hard-running son of Count Fleet, won today's feature race, finishing three lengths ahead of the closest opposition. Mill River's Alablue was second, a head in front of Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Algasir, the last named a $106,000 purchase.

DEAR FOLKS:

AT DELAWARE

That rough-and-ready style of riding that carried Joe Culmone from a poor war refugee to one of the Nation's top pilots, caught up with him once again. There's never a dull moment with the kid around. If he isn't claiming a foul against a fellow rider he is having one claimed against him. He had a charmed life early in the meeting but finally went to the well once too often and now must sit out the remainder of the session. Joe likes riding but he also likes to eat and his suspension means oodles of noodles—his beloved spaghetti. Let's hope he doesn't eat himself out of the saddle. His absence won't help the betting here. Justine Funkhouser and his trainer, Frank Gall, were all smiles about Noble Impulse winning Monmouth's Saturday feature. It was the first stakes win for the owner, trainer as well as Jockey Willie Downs—BILL

Oregon Coed Wins Medal in Western Open

Miss DeMoss Leads Pros With a 75

Denver, June 19 (AP).—A smiling amateur from Corvallis, Ore., slipped past a quartet of favorite professionals today to claim the medal award with a 75 in the 18-hole qualifying test for the 21st Western Women's Open golf championship.

No one was paying much attention to pretty Grace DeMoss a 22-year-old co-ed from Oregon State College, when the firing started today. She was playing in her first Western Open and was paired with Louise Suggs, defending champion from Carrollton, Ga. When Miss Suggs clicked off a neat par 36 on the front nine and Miss DeMoss came in with a 38 she still was not given much notice.

But as winds and rain made the already damp course tougher and tougher, the honey-haired Oregonian hit her stride by shooting birdies on 11 and 12, the latter by sinking a 40-foot putt. She held par even the rest of the way except for a five on the par four sixteenth and finished with a one under 37 for the back side and the one over total for the 6,33 yard course.

Meanwhile, Miss Suggs took three from the edge of the green on the tenth to go one over, three putted the thirteenth and scuffed a second shot into the water on the sixteenth to wind up with a 41 that gave her a 77 and a tie with Betty jameson of San Antonio for second place. Miss Jameson scored a 38-39 for her 77.

Beverly Hanson, a Pasadena, Calif., amateur and the only player except Miss Suggs to match par on the first nine, ran into even more grief on the return trip to take a 42 for a 78.

Scores of the 32 leaders:

Grace de Moss, Corvallis, Oreg.	38	37	75
Betty Jameson, San Antonio	38	39	77
Louise Suggs, Carrollton, Ga.	36	41	77
Mrs. George Zaharias, Chicago	39	39	78
Peggy Kirk, Findlay, Ohio	39	39	78
Patty Berg, Minneapolis	41	37	78

GW Sailors Take Lead In Nationals

Newport Beach, Calif., June 19 (AP).—George Washington University of Washington, D. C., took the lead today after the first of three days of sailing for the 14th Annual National Intercollegiate Small Boat Championships.

The Washingtonians piled up 114 points to top the 11 teams competing. Army, the scheduled 12th competitor, did not show up with an entry.

GW's No. 1 skipper, George Collins, also led the first day individual scoring with 60 points. GW's Bob Harwood is the No. 2 man. Each skipper races every other one in his division during the three days. Twelve races were sailed today, out of the 44 total. Some skippers had shapely coeds as crew "men."

Saperstein Buys Stags' Franchise

New York, June 19 (AP).—The Chicago Stags' franchise in the National Basketball Association was purchased today by Abe Saperstein, owner and coach of the Harlem Globetrotters, for a sum approximating $50,000.

The Globetrotters will not play in the Association.

Gil Bogley Gains In CollegeTourney

Austin, Tex., June 19 (AP).—Washington, D. C.'s, Gil Bogley, playing for Princeton, advanced to the third round of the National Collegiate Tennis Tourney here today with a 6—1, 6—1, trimming of Northwestern's William Landin. Houston, by 6—0, 6—1 scores.

Faurot Addresses Alumni

Don Faurot, University of Missouri head football coach, will address the Washington Chapter of the Missouri Alumni Association at a luncheon today at the Lee House. Faurot is expected to discuss Missouri's prospects for next fall and a Missouri-Maryland series, scheduled to start in 1951.

Ike Hale Wins at New Bern

Guy Lombardo Thrills Fans At Wilson Point Regatta

By Happy Walker

THE WILSON POINT MEN'S CLUB staged its eighth annual regatta on the Middle River course over the weekend, only this year it was different. The difference was Guy Lombardo.

Walker

The band leader, famed for his Gold-Cup racing prowess, trailed his revamped Tempo VI down from Detroit to enter the special invitational 15-mile unlimited class event on Saturday, more as a trial run than anything else.

The spectators, and they lined the shore by the thousands, cared little about his slow 61.839 mph. average speed around the hazardous, narrow course—they just wanted to see the Guy.

Frank Foulke, Baltimore speedster, pitted his 225 hydro, Sagana XII against Tempo VI, at a speed of 58.164 mph, for the 15-mile grind.

Earl Hildebrand continued his march of victories, outclassing Jack Van Deman, Philadelphia, in the 48 hydros, but only on the best elapsed time. Howard Scott, Alexandria 48 pilot, took one third and 225 points only to run into engine trouble in the second heat. Amato Taneal ran out of the money.

The Thacker brothers ran up against Howard Durm, Anapolis, whose new D racing Cry Baby nosed out Thacker's Jezebel also on best elapsed time.

MEANWHILE, Washington's Ike Hale took top honors in the C hydro class in the outboard regatta staged at New Bern, N. C., at the expense of a wide field of topnotchers including Doug Creech, national titleholder. The Eastern Carolina Yacht Club played host for the one-day affair.

Crossings should be Seen and not Felt

WHEN the sign says "Stop, Look and Listen," the prudent driver does.

But after that what? Must you still move forward at a cautious crawl or pay toll in jar, jitter and jounce?

Not, good sir, when you're at a Buick's wheel.

You step on the throttle, move easily, swiftly forward. Your wheels dance—your tires drum-roll over rail and plank.

But four gentle coil springs, one on each wheel, are working their magic—and you hear rather than feel the rough spot you have crossed.

That, of course, is only one kind of rough going you can meet in your travels. It's only one kind of discomfort your Buick's built to master.

For beside gentle coil springing, every Buick rides on soft, low-pressure tires. Every one is steadied by a rigid torque-tube. Every one boasts a rigid, weave-proof frame—soft, sure shock absorbers—even special engine mountings to minimize vibration.

They can have the special added smoothness of Dynaflow Drive,* cushioning power-thrust in spinning oil.

So rough spots seem to level out at your coming. Boulevards take on a new smoothness. You know what riding comfort is—why the Buick ride is called matchless.

So how about it?

Come climb into a Buick and see for yourself what we mean. You'll get a style-thrill and a power-thrill along with your ride-thrill—and a story on price that eliminates your last excuse for not traveling in the Buick manner!

*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

FOUR-WAY FOREFRONT
This rugged front end (1) sets the style note, (2) saves on repair costs—vertical bars are individually replaceable, (3) avoids "locking horns," (4) makes parking and garaging easier.

Only BUICK has Dynaflow—and with it goes:
HIGHER-COMPRESSION Fireball valve-in-head power in three engines. (New F-263 engine in SUPER models.) NEW-PATTERN STYLING, with MULTI-GUARD forefront, taper-through fenders, "double bubble" taillights WIDE-ANGLE VISIBILITY, close-up road view both forward and back • TRAFFIC-HANDY SIZE, less over-all length for easier parking and garaging, short turning radius • EXTRA-WIDE SEATS cradled between the axles • SOFT BUICK RIDE, from all-coil springing, Safety-Ride rims, low-pressure tires, ride-steadying torque-tube WIDE ARRAY OF MODELS with Body by Fisher.

left. Evans followed with a hit off Cain's glove that scored Michaels from third and permitted Ostrowski to reach third, the ball bounding into short right field. Then Hudson dropped a high fly single into center to get Ostrowski home.

Cain filled the bases with a pass to Yost, and then the Nats muffed a big inning. Dente grounded to the box, and Cain's throw forced Evans at the plate. Noren grounded out to Robinson.

Hudson wriggled out of a seventh-inning situation in which Robinson opened up with a single and was sacrificed along by Majeski. Sid fanned Pinch-hitter Baker, walked Fox semi-intentionally and then struck out Pinch-hitter Goldsberry.

Ray Scarborough moved in as the Sox pitcher at the the start of the seventh and was immediately saluted by Vernon's single to left. But the Nats fluffed that scoring chance. On a hit and run sign, Mele whiffed, and Vernon was out going into second.

Hudson breezed past the eighth, but came the ninth and all kinds of trouble, started by Rickert's single to left that put the tying run on base. Trouble piled up for the Nats when Masi bunted smartly past Yost and Hudson, both of whom were charging the ball which rolled into shortstop territory for a single.

Pinch-hitter Gus Zernial was given an intentional walk, and Fox got Rickert in with the tying run with a fly to center. The Nats expostulated wildly that Noren's throw had Ricker out at the plate, but Umpire Summers said "No," and other things. Hudson finally got out with a tie at that point on Goldsberry's fly to Ostrowski.

In tomorrow night's series opener at Detroit, Conrado Marrero will pitch for the Nats . . . Hudson was throwing the ball harder in the first two innings tonight than he was in his pre-war career.

Free Clinic Starts Today for Youth At East Potomac

Accommodations for more than 100 boys and girls are ready for the opening today of East Potomac's second annual free junior golf clinic.

Registration starting at 10 a. m. will be necessary for the five weekly lessions, Manager Eddie Bean announced.

The youngsters, from 10 to 17, are furnished golf balls, tees, clubs, and other equipment and facilities at no cost. Al Treder, East Potomac professional, and Frank Hartig, golfer and instructor for 28 years, will me among the teachers.

Similar clinics were organized last year at Rock Creek, Fort Dupont, and Anacostia public golf courses with 300 boys and girls learning the game. After their reorganization this summer, tournaments among boy and girl golfers of each clinic will follow the lessons, with a city-wide tourney slated for later in the season.

AAU Meet 'Best'

Harrison Dillard's time. His record ism now in the process of being approved as official.

"Bill Albans, North Carolina's great star, who took 22 points all by himself last week at the NCAA meet, will give him competition in both the high and low hurdles.

"USC's Craig Dixon, who won last year in both the high and low hurdles, will be back.

"A lot of brilliant but erratic high jumpers are in the field. Verne McGrew of Rice tops the list. He can jump 6 feet 7¾ inches on a good day.

"Virgil Severns of Kansas State is another of the same kind. His best jump is 6 feet 8¼ inches but he has his off days, too. I wouldn't be surprised to see a freshman dark horse from USC, Emanuel Ronquillo, come in ahead of the field.

He's done 6 feet 6¼ inches consistently. Jack Razetto of San Diego has done 6, 8¼."

"In the broad jump, Jerome Biffle of Denver University, the NCAA champ, whose best leap is 25 feet 7¾ inches, leads the field. Gay Bryan of Stanford has done 25 feet 3 inches.

"The pole vault will see some real high flyers. Bob Smith of San Diego has won the NCAA the last two years in a row, the only time in history it's been done.

"Bob Richards of USC, last year's AAU champ, George Rasmussen of Oregon, runnerup last year, and John Montgomery of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, can do well over 14½ feet.

"The shot-put will be a great two-man show between Yale's Jim Fuchs and Stanford's Otis Chandler, the two best boys in the country in this event."

Jordan expects the team championship to be a close race between the Los Angeles Athletic Club and the New York Athletic Club with the Olympic Club of San Francisco and the Pioneer Club of New York ranking high.

Tyler Held Legally Sane And Must Stand Trial

Psychiatrist Traces Defendant's Life: Truant, Petty Thief Who Loved Power

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Three psychiatrists reported to District Court yesterday that William A. Tyler, jr., accused of the Good Friday murder of two Lansburgh's department store watchmen, is legally sane.

The reports were submitted to Judge Alexander Holtzoff on the third day of Tyler's trial. He faces the electric chair if convicted.

Although Judge Holtzoff took no action on the reports, it was indicated the defense may attempt to use at least a part of the report of Dr. E. Y. Williams of Howard University and Freedmen's Hospital, later in the trial.

Background Described

The other findings, submitted by Drs. Joseph L. Gilbert and Dr. Bernard L. Cruvant, were brief, but Dr. Williams portrayed the psychological background against which Tyler stepped from delinquent child to young thief to alleged murderer.

Dr. Williams said Tyler was one of three children whose parents possessed "real solid citizenship" and tried to chart the correct path. But Tyler, according to the report, became bored with school, had apparently low intelligence, and fought with his teacher. He seldom played with others, saying he was too "large" and feared he would get "hurt," the report said.

At 12, Tyler's difficulties began, Dr. Williams said, and beatings came his way. His mother begged him to be "good" and his father often wept as he pleaded with his son.

"About this time, 12-15 years, he became obsessed with two ideas: having lots of money (power) and getting away from home (wanderlust)," the report says.

"Dominated" His Feelings

"These two ideas seemed to dominate his feelings and he never thought at all of girls during this time. He was also obsessed with the idea that he must steal money. At 15-16, he did his first stealing and was unsuccessful and was sent to Blue Plains, but nevertheless he experienced great relief for the first time from this tension. There was no remorse or sense of guilt."

Tyler left school before finishing the sixth grade and twice was sent to Blue Plains for truancy.

Williams said that Tyler's sex life was "poor." It began at 16 years with a woman nine years his senior. Since then, Tyler has "cared for no one, liked no one, and stated he never looked forward to marrying as he liked no woman for that purpose," says the report.

The defendant shows evidence of emotional immaturity and has a disturbance of "mood and affect," although his association and memory are good, Williams reported. But there have been periodic outbursts of mania or violence, he says further.

He concluded as follows:

"The simple question is whether he knows right from wrong will be raised by the court. I believe he does. But I believe his response is conditioned to any situation by the total background—mental and emotional—which shows psychopathic and early—psychotic traits."

The prosecution was slowly building up its case against Tyler, and today will seek to present Tyler's confession. Then, to the four-man, eight-woman jury will be described how Tyler reenacted the crime, the prosecution said.

Cupid Twinges Conscience; Man Admits $3000 Holdup

Young Alexander V. Rom, who told police love goaded his conscience into confession, was held under $10,000 bond on a robbery charge yesterday. Rom gave himself up as the lone bandit in the $3000 street-holdup of a Western Auto store clerk last March.

The 20-year-old youth, of 3900 37th st., Brentwood, Md., surrendered at the Twelfth Precinct late Sunday night.

His confession to police was read before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence. The commissioner asked Rom if the statement were true.

Replied Rom: "Yes, but I just want to make one thing clear. I bought my girl friend a ring—true. But I didn't spend any of this money on the ring."

Lawrence asked Rom why he had surrendered.

"I just can't hold it back," the youth said. "I just want to get it off my conscience."

According to police, Rom admitted that on March 6 he held up John T. Reed, also 20, of 5037 55th ave., Rogers Heights, Md., at 20th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne.

Reed was on his way to a bank with $2025 in cash and $1049 in checks, receipts from the Western Auto store at 1731 Rhode Island ave. ne.

Rom said, police reported, that he used a toy gun blackened with shoe polish and put adhesive tape over his face as a disquise.

Police quoted Rom as saying he escaped in a cab, threw the gun away and went home.

There, according to the confession, Rom burned the clothes he wore and destroyed the checks and about half the cash.

Rom told police, detectives said, that he staged the holdup because he was "up to my neck in debt." With the money he said he kept, police continued, he paid off the debts, but quit his job as a librarian in Prince Georges County, Md., and went to Florida for two weeks.

ALEXANDER V. ROM
. . . Conscience-stricken

A loan to a friend and a $250 expenditure on his car completed Rom's accounting for the money, police said.

Detectives said that in questioning him, Rom told them he was in love and wanted to make himself "right" so he could be free to marry.

Area Woman Killed by Car In Virginia

Mrs. Julia C. Proctor, 41-year-old housewife of 1100 Prince st., Alexandria, was killed instantly Sunday night as she crossed U. S. Route 1, about 12 miles north of Fredericksburg, Va.

Her husband, Wallace C. Proctor, 38, an iron worker, had stopped their automobile on the side of the road and had let his wife out. She had crossed the road and was returning to the auto when she was struck by a car which police said was driven by William E. Fox, 31, of 2737 S. Walter Reed dr., Arlington.

Mrs. Proctor was pronounced dead on the scene by the Fredericksburg Rescue Squad.

Fox was charged with involuntary manslaughter and released under $2000 bond. Trial date was set for July 6 in Stafford Trial Justice Court.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Thursday in St. Mary's Church, S. Royal st., Alexandria. Burial will be in Mt. Comfort Cemetery.

Jury Clears Driver In District Fatality

A coroner's jury yesterday cleared Louis C. Long, 66, of 509 E st. nw., in the traffic death early Sunday of Mrs. Mary O'Neill, 89, of 3100 Connecticut ave nw.

Mrs. O'Neill was struck by a cab at 27th st. and Cathedral ave. nw. while on her way to church.

Long testified the woman had stepped into the road from between parked cars.

Another witness testified the woman had not stepped from between parked cars but walked out of a driveway 30 feet away.

Fight Is Launched On Double Parking

The Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board last night voted to begin an educational campaign to cut down on double-parking.

Opening the drive will be a letter to all organizations operating trucks asking for cooperation. The letter will include a copy of pertinent regulations. No other steps were decided upon.

The board's parking committee, which submitted the suggestion to the meeting at the Municipal Center, said in its report that there's no way to stop illegal double parking by trucks unless a policeman sees the violation.

The board approved a request from its public information committee for $20,000 to be used during the next fiscal year.

Inspector William J. Cunningham, chief of the Traffic Division, reported that there were 12,157 more traffic arrests, 543 more accidents and 91 more traffic injuries up to May 31 this year than during the same period last year.

Hearing Wednesday

Bottle Club Is Enjoined In District

The Gold Key Club, a Washington after hours spot, was enjoined yesterday from "transacting its business" in the District.

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough in District Court ruled that the Maryland corporation "for all practical purposes was not a club at all, but an after hours resort where anyone with $1.25 could go."

Judge Goldsboough scheduled a hearing June 21 on the wording of the injunction order.

Charles E. Ford argued in court that the club located at 606 E st. nw., had been enjoined, in effect, only from transacting business illegally in Washington.

Last of 12 Clubs

Assistant United States Attorney Ross O'Donoghue told the Judge he felt the club should be enjoined from transacting any business in Washington.

The Gold Key is the last of 12 after hours spots U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay has sought to close on the grounds that they violated their corporate charters.

Of the other 11, one has been acquitted of charter abuse, but is closed, seven have been convicted and dissolved, another has agreed to apply for a liquor license, and two others await trial, but are also closed.

Judge Goldsborough said the Gold Key had violated the law by selling liquor after hours and without a license. He said persons had to join the club every time they went there.

To Remain Open

Albert B. Glickfield, Gold Key president, said the club would remain open temporarily, but no liquor would be sold, and members would be given free admission.

Glickfield testified he uses Gold Key money to pay all his expenses including taxes, but deducts this from a $10,000 yearly salary.

He refused to reveal, on grounds of self-incrimination, the sources of other income he said he had.

During the three-day trial, it was testified that some club whisky was diluted, and that nonmembers, without their own bottles, could buy whisky.

The club was chartered in Maryland to operate for the "social, patriotic and educational uplift" of its members.

Area Businessmen Named

Two Washington area businessmen were among 11 new directors reelected yesterday by the Virginia Retail Merchants Association, meeting in Norfolk, Va. They are Irvin M. Hufford of Alexandria and Leon H. Logan, of Arlington.

Land Suit Opens, Court Tours Area

Fairfax County Asks Judges to Dismiss Falls Church Bid For Annexation

The Falls Church annexation suit against Fairfax County opened yesterday with the three-judge tribunal devoting the entire first day to a personal tour of the disputed territory.

Judges Paul E. Brown, Burnett Miller and J. R. H. Alexander were taken on the tour of the "annexable zone" in a bus furnished by Falls Church. Attorneys for both the city and the county as well as court officials also went along.

The area in question takes in about 10.75 square miles to the east, south and west of Falls Church. Largely developed for residential use, it is sought by the city on the grounds that it is more adaptable to the urban administration of the city than to the county's rural governmental setup.

At the conclusion of the tour, a motion to dismiss the annexation suit was filed for Fairfax by Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh Marsh. The court agreed to hear arguments on the motion when the trial resumes at 10 a. m. today.

Also filed yesterday was a petition bearing the names of about 400 Falls Church city residents who are opposed to the annexation.

Marsh, in defending the suit, is being assisted by former State Delegate Robert J. McCandlish, jr. Pressing the suit for Falls Church are City Attorney Larue Van Meter and Horace Edwards, former mayor of Richmond. The trial is expected to take three weeks.

200 Debate Finances in Falls Church

About 200 Falls Church citizens last night attended a heated hearing on the city's proposed general fund and school budgets at Madison School.

After almost three hours debate on issues ranging from the proposed 25-cent increase in the school tax rate to whether the city manager should get a salary increase, the city council promised to study all suggestions.

The proposed tax rate increase produced the most spirited discussion, touched off by Michael J. Byrne, representing a committee of the Falls Church Chamber of Commerce.

Byrne suggested borrowing "about $19,000 at 3 percent interest instead of raising the tax rate." In this way, he said, the school board would have "enough money to operate until taxes are collected, and would have to pay only $93.75 in interest."

School Superintendent Irvin H. Schmitt argued that the school board would "still be in the hole for the lean July-to-November period, since the money would have to come from somewhere." He said the proposed increase was for payment of interest on bonds, as well as for costs of operation.

The general fund budget calls for estimated revenues and expenditures of $278,619; the school budget, for estimated expenditures of $226,494, and estimated receipts of $296,456.

Final Selections To Be Announced Later By Talent Scout

Seven of 25 candidates for parts in the national American Legion revue, "Red, White and Blue," were tabbed "for future reference" after tryouts last night in the American Legion Club house, 2437 15th st. nw.

Roy Mack, Hollywood talent scout who judged the tryouts, said he would make his final selections July 1, and notify the successful performers.

The revue will open in October during the Legion's annual convention in Los Angeles, then will go on a two-year tour of the nation.

Those tabbed by Mack were Mrs. Doris Lee Deitrich, 23, of 1101 Euclid st. nw., who does pantomines; Grover Boydton, 2126 Connecticut ave. nw., a modern dance interpreter; Louise Whiting, 20, 5801 Potomac ave. nw., a ballet dancer; Thomas Pence, 25, 4108 N. 21st rd., Arlington, a ballet dancer; C. Robert Kriegh, 24, of 2517 S. Oxford st., Arlington, a baritone soloist; Gail Fletcher, 38, 232 Cromwell tr. ne., a song stylist; and Billy Allsbrook, a singer from Portsmouth, Va.

Milk Board Held Legal In Virginia

Richmond, Va., June 19 (AP).—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals today affirmed a Richmond City Circuit Court decision upholding the constitutionality of the State's Milk and Cream Act of 1934.

The opinion in the milk case was one of 19 returned today.

Chief Justice Edward W. Hudgins wrote the opinion in the milk act case which was instituted by the Elizabeth City County Board of Supervisors and several organzations in the Peninsula area following State Milk Commission orders fixing the minmum prices of milk sold in the Newport News market.

Appellants contended that the 1934 act unlawfully delegates to private individuals the power of legislation and that:

1. The composition of the Milk Commission is in itself a denial of the right of a fair and unprejudiced hearing, and therefore is a denial of the due process of law.

2. There is no existing emergency justifying "the unlawful and unwarranted use of police power."

Hudgins' opinion found that the milk and cream act fully protects the rights of anyone affected by the composition and orders of the milk commission.

"Price fixing," he said, "is within the legislative field, and it is a general legislative policy to submit such technical problems to an experienced and informed tribunal."

The Chief Justice said the preamble of the act does not say it was passed because of an economic emergency in 1934.

Milk Deliveries Under Way; Rise In Price Looms

Half-Cent Increase Probable to Offset Expense of New Jobs at Dairies

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Milk deliveries in the Washington area were almost back to normal yesterday. Those who did not receive regular supplies yesterday will have them delivered today.

Consumers, most of whom went without fresh milk during the eight-day strike, were wondering whether the settlement terms would mean a price increase.

Dairy executives, who preferred to talk about resumption of deliveries, guessed they probably would have to go up a half-cent a quart.

150 Jobs to Be Filled

There was a difference of opinion on whether an increase would come soon or about August 1, when about 150 employes will be added by the dairies to provide the 5½-day average week won by the employes' union.

The last change in area prices came last April 1, when they dropped one cent a quart. Present cost is 20½ cents a quart for delivered Grade A or plain homogenized Grade A or plain homogenized milk. Vitamin D, sold by some dairies, is 21½ cents delivered. The store price is generally about 2 cents a quart lower than the delivered price.

Meanwhile, Representative A. L. Miller (R., Neb.), a House District Committee member, said he will continue his attempt to open the District market to all milk which meets U. S. Public Health Service standards.

Aided by the fast work of the Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Association in getting milk to the dairy plants a few hours after settlement of the strike Sunday, most distributors were able to deliver to homes as well as stores yesterday.

Some Products Held Up

Delivery of milk products, such as chocolate milk and buttermilk, was deferred in favor of the plain fluid.

Some smaller dairies were able to fill regular Monday orders to householders under the every-other-day system. Regular Tuesday customers will be served today.

Larger dairies supplied most householders who normally would receive milk yesterday with half-orders. Regular Tuesday customers will receive full orders today. By Wednesday, all deliveries will be completely normal, spokesmen said.

The rapid deliveries were made possible partly by fast phone work by the producers' association after the strike settlement.

Within two and a half hours, 120 milk shippers had been notified. A total of 31,000 gallons of milk headed for milk products manufacturing plants was diverted to Washington.

Sold at Surplus Prices

Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the producers, estimated farmers lost $3 a hundredweight by having to sell at surplus prices during the strike, and through higher transportation costs.

With 160,000 to 165,000 gallons produced daily for the Washington market, the loss ran to some $45,000 a day, it was estimated.

Dairy spokesmen said it would be several days before their accountants would estimate the additional costs which will result from the employes' shorter work week.

"We are compiling figures to arrive at the cost of settlement," said Vice President Herman A. Schulteis of Chestnut-Farms-Chevy Chase, "so we can appraise soundly and fairly any price adjustment which may be necessary. We felt a keen responsibility to John Q. Public during the strike and we will continue to do so."

The employes won 46 additional days off for the period between August 1, 1950 and June 6, 1952. Some dairies plan to base their additional costs on that period only, while others plan to average the total over the period beginning now and ending June 6, 1952.

The cut in the average work week from 48 to 44 hours will mean at a rough estimate the hiring of one additional dairy worker for every 11 now employed. With 1650 employes at the nine dairies, about 150 new workers will be added.

In the House Representative Miller said he hoped to introduce today a bill to wipe out the present Milk Act requirement that all milk sold in the District must be from farms inspected by the District Health Department.

He said the present law is like an "economic club" over consumers. He reiterated previous charges that the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association has an "economic monopoly" in the District.

Littles Win Legal Right To Adopt Boy

Judge Matthew F. McGuire of District Court yesterday awarded custody of David Gregory Hudson, 4, to Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Little, 1317 10th st. nw.

David was one of three children that Mrs. Little left with the Board of Welfare last October. She took the step in protest after Judge T. Alan Goldsborough said that she was not a "fit" mother for the children. She has cared for David virtually since his birth.

Judge Goldsborough subsequently restored one of the other children to its natural mother. The third child, a daughter by a previous marriage, is now with Mrs. Little.

In granting a petition of adoption filed by the Littles, Judge McGuire ruled that the Littles were fit parents for the child.

District's Bid For U. S. Loan Sent to House

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday forwarded to Congress the District government's request for a Federal loan to hasten expansion of the Washington water supply system.

The request reached the Capitol in time for consideration in today's meeting of the Senate District Appropriations Subcommittee. The meeting was called by Chairman Lister Hill (D., Ala.) to review the House-approved District appropriation bill for the fiscal year starting July 1.

The Commissioners' proposal for water construction would add $1,928,000 to a House-approved total of $1,050,000 to be spent in the next fiscal year on developing the Washington Aqueduct, the Federally-operated water supply system.

On the budget addition, $1,405,000 would be the first Federal loan to be granted under the recent act authorizing up to 23 million dollars in U. S. Treasury loans during the next decade for boosting District water supply capacity. The loans would be repaid in the two following decades.

The construction to which the budget addition would apply totals about six million dollars. The rest would be provided in future budgets. The major projects include a 30-million-gallon clear water basin, and a new chemical building and operating center at McMillan Reservoir.

Among other major projects slated for attention in today's session of the Hill subcommittee are funds to start the East Capitol st. bridge over the Anacostia River, a million-dollar cut in sewer construction funds ordered by the House, and House reductions in welfare and health funds, including District payments to private hospitals for the care of indigent patients.

He became very ill, and discovered that, although the vaccines were suited to Orientals, Westerners would die if given them in normal doses. Now executive officer at a Navy Dispensary here, Captain Thyson lives at 3601 Connecticut ave. nw.

A German-born toolmaker who declared one week after his 1943 naturalization that he had no love for the United States and would not fight for it yesterday was denied his right to citizenship.

The decision was made by the United States Court of Appeals against Peter Alfons Bindczyck, of Elmhurst, N. Y., who came here in 1938.

He was subsequently inducted into the Army. While stationed at Camp Ritchie, Md., he was naturalized in court on December 2, 1943. On December 9, the Government moved to set aside the naturalization.

"At the hearing on the motion he (Bindczyck) testified that he previously stated in court that he was willing to bear arms against all enemies and that he approved of this Government, whereas neither statement was true and he was testifying falsely at the time," the Appeals Court said.

Last year, Bindczyck asked District Court to grant him a summary judgment declaring him a citizen. He said that the revocation hearing was held while he was under arrest and without a lawyer appearing in his behalf. But waiving any constitutional questions, he said that the Nationality Act of 1940 was violated by the revocation hearing.

The Appeals Court, through Judge Bennett Champ Clark found, however, that the court which granted the naturalization originally had the power to revoke it and the Nationality Act of 1940 was not violated.

Gun Plea Fails, U. S. Court Upholds Murder Conviction

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the second-degree murder conviction of Mrs. Alice Morton, 25, formerly of 609 2d st. nw., now serving 15 years to life imprisonment.

She was found guilty of the fatal shooting last year of David Stephens, 32, of 618 8th st. ne.

Main contention in the appeal was that the Government erroneously permitted to introduce evidence of two witnesses that two weeks prior to the shooting a gun had been seen lying on her bed. During the trial, the Government was unable to produce the gun.

The defendant claimed admission of the evidence was improper because possession of a gun is a crime here and that evidence of a crime with which a defendant is not charged should not be presented to a jury.

The Appeals Court, through Judge Bennett Champ Clark, wrote:

"The short answer to this contention, however, is that the D. C. Code . . . clearly establishes that possession of a firearm in one's home is not a crime."

Next, the defense claimed the evidence of the gun was inadmissible because no connection between the weapon seen on her bed and the murder weapon was shown.

In answer to this, Judge Clark said, "Certainly a gun is peculiarly adaptable to the crime of shooting a person. And thus appellant's prior possession of the physical means of committing this murder is admissible as some evidence of the possibility or probability of her having done it."

Handicapped Aid Bill Seen Progressing

At Annual Dinner

Montgomery Award Given Dr. Morris

Dr. Harold P. Morris, of the Woodside Park Civic Association Silver Spring, last night received the Oliver Owen Kuhn Cup for outstanding achievement at the twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Presentation was made by Walter H. McClennon, president-elect, at Kenwood Country Club, Bethesda.

Some 250 persons attended the dinner at which the federation's history and achievements were reviewed. Speakers included Herbert N. Eaton, retiring president of the federation; Stephen James of Silver Spring, its third president, and Frederic P. Lee, president of the Montgomery County Council.

Guests included Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), members of the county delegation to the State legislature and county officials.

Legislation for an expanded Federal program to aid the physically handicapped has "made marked progress" during this session of Congress, Representative John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), said last night.

McCormack told the District Department of the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped that the legislation, on which hearings have been held in the Senate, is sound and fair and "not charity in any way."

If the Senate passes the bill before adjournment, he said, there is an "outside" chance that the House will take favorable action before the end of the session.

Paul A. Strachan, president of the federation, said that the physically handicapped don't feel they are entitled to special consideration because they are disabled, but they do want equal consideration in the job market where their handicaps will not interfere with their work.

At the meeting held at the National Press Club, Elmer Jebo of the Veterans Employment Service of the Department of Labor declared that as long as the Nation has an expanding economy the physically handicapped will be able to find job opportunities.

Dr. Arthur Morris of the Georgetown Clinic for Epileptics said that about half of all epileptics can be shown to have focal or "one-place" lesions. Of this group, he said, 67 percent can be cured of seizures by surgical treatment.

Scouts to Honor Beard Memory On Birthday Eve

The memory of "Uncle" Dan Beard, the first National Boy Scout Commissioner, will be honored tonight on the eve of the one hundredth anniversary of his birth.

Boy Scouts of Jamboree Troop No. 14 will gather at 8 p. m. at the Chevy Chase Baptist Church, Connecticut and Western aves. nw., for the occasion. Richard P. Ellinger, Scoutmaster, will be in charge, with W. S. Anderson, Western District commissioner of the National Capital Area Council, chief speaker.

Beard, one of the founders of the U. S. Boy Scout movement, died in 1941. His birthday will be observed by Scouts all over America this week.

Temperatures Below Average; . . Not Humidity

If it's any comfort, temperatures have been a few degrees below par in Washington these last few days, and are due to stay that way today.

The Weather Bureau forecast mostly sunny skies with a high of about 80. The "average" high for June 20 is 84.

Yesterday's top of 81—at 3:30 p. m.—seemed uncomfortable because of the 66 percent humidity. Lowest temperature was 62 at 3:15 a. m. Humidity yesterday ranged down from 90 percent in the early morning, began rising again in the evening.

Pair Wins 'Policemen of Month' Award

The Washington Post

Major Barrett and "Policemen of the Month," Pvts. Robert Foright (center) and James Salt, jr.

Grinning and happy, two young police rookies yesterday were rewarded as March's "Policemen of the Month" for their capture of a man and woman suspected as yoke robbers.

Pvts. James Salt, jr., 25, and Robert N. Foright, 24, received medals from Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent. From Inspector Walter T. Storm, assistant superintendent, they received certificates of merit.

The ceremony took place in Barrett's office.

Salt and Foright were driving March 12 when, according to the commendation, they saw a man lying on the sidewalk near 17th and Church sts. nw. A man and woman were "standing over the prostrate form," the report says.

"As Private Salt drew near . . . the man and woman . . . fled. Salt singled out the fleeing man and a chase ensued . . . The chase was terminated when Private Salt brought the suspect down with a flying tackle and a struggle ensued. with Private Salt subduing and arresting the suspect," the commendation says.

The woman was arrested "by clever detective work on the part of Private Foright," the statement continues.

The pair was identified as Freddie Cummings, 20, of 1884 7th st. nw., and Elaine M. Thorpe, 22, of 1821 Kalorama rd. nw. The victim was Jessie Leonard Johnson, 45, of 3014 Elbert ave., Alexandria. Charged with robbery by yoke, the man and woman were held for grand jury action.

"The alertness and attentiveness to duty on the part of these two young officers, both having served less than a year in this department . . . is highly commendable police work," says the commendation.

Salt and Foright were recommended for the awards by Capt. Charles J. Sullivan, Third Precinct commander.

Salt lives at 5730 Chillum Heights dr., Hyattsville, Md., and was appointed a private July 1, 1949. Foright lives at 2308 Park pl. se., and was appointed to the force on May 2, 1949.

Man Plunges To Death From Calvert Span

A retired Government Printing Office laborer, suffering from a heart condition, plunged to his death from the Calvert Street Bridge yesterday.

Tracing through a postal money order in his wallet, police identified the victim as Lawson Johnson, 65, 2031 Flagler pl. nw.

He was pronounced dead where he landed at the curb of the Rock Creek Parkway by an Emergency Hospital doctor at 3:40 p. m.

Relatives said Johnson left home at about 1 p. m. yesterday to go for a walk. At the corner of North Capitol st. and Florida ave. nw., he was met by his nephew, Charles B. Gray, a cab driver who lives at the Flagler st. address.

Gray said he offered to drive Johnson home because it was raining but was told, "I don't care to go back home now. I'll be along later."

Gray's wife, Mrs. Estelle Gray, said her uncle had been suffering from a heart condition and had retired from the Government Printing Office about six months ago.

In his wallet police found a March, 1950, letter from his wife, Mrs. Ada Johnson, who was visiting relatives in St. Albans, N. Y., at the time.

In the letter, Mrs. Johnson urged her husband to "forget about what you were talking and keep your identification." Several plastic cardholders in the wallet were empty.

District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald withheld a death certificate pending an autopsy today.

Carpenter Faces Two Hearings On Check Charges

William G. Wilhelm, 28-year-old carpenter of 2002 Fordham st., University City, Md., gained a continuance in eight bad check charges filed against him in Prince Georges County yesterday; only to be turned over to Montgomery County authorities to face two more.

Wilhelm's hearing on the eight cases, totalling $149, was continued until August 3 in Hyattsville Police Court.

But on leaving the courtroom, he found a Montgomery County detective waiting to press the other charges involving $40. Wilhelm will face a hearing on them July 25 in Silver Spring Police Court. Bond was set at $2000 in Prince Georges and $1000 in Montgomery.

5-Day Workweek For Policemen Up At Capitol Today

The Senate District Committee today is scheduled to consider the bill to reduce the Metropolitan Police workweek from six to five days.

A District subcommittee headed by Senator Edward L. Leahy (D., R. I.) agreed yesterday to delete a 60-day delay provision from the bill. This would have provided 60 days' delay between the time funds were available and the time the shorter week would be put into effect. The House has approved the five-day bill without the waiting provision.

Medical Society Defers Charity Merger Action

The executive board of the District Medical Society has deferred action on proposals for a merger of fund-raising activities of various health organizations.

The board, which met at the home of Dr. William Earl Clark, chairman, directed Theodore Wiprud, secretary of the society, to gather information for presentation at the board's July meeting.

Dr. Osuna, who would have been 66 Saturday, had been in ill health since he suffered a heart attack this past January.

He had lived in Arlington since joining the Education Foundation, Inc., Office of Inter-American Affairs, as a specialist in May, 1945. Prior to his retirement a year later, he traveled extensively in Central America, where he aided in modernizing the school systems.

Dr. Osuna, a native of Caguas, Puerto Rico, came to the United States when 16 and was naturalized in 1917. He attended State Normal School in Bloomsburg, Pa., and was graduated with an A. B. degree from Pennsylvania State College, and in 1923 received the Ph. D. degree from Columbia University.

Following graduation from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1915 he served two years as a missionary in Anasco, P. R. He became director of the summer school at the University of Puerto Rico from 1922 to 1928, and from 1922 to 1945 served as dean of the university's College of Education.

Dr. Osuna was the author of a recently published work, "History of Education in Puerto Rico."

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Thompson Osuna; a son, James D. Osuna; a daughter, Miss Ann T. Osuna, all of the Arlington address, and a brother, Pedro Osuna, of Rio Piedras, P. R.

Funeral Today For 3 Victims Of Suffocation

Funeral services for three small brothers who suffocated Friday in their icebox "playhouse" at Tauxemont, Va., will be held today at 2 p. m. at Bethlehem Baptist Church, Gum Springs, Va.

The boys, Leon, 8; Wells, 4, and Ronnie Proctor, 3, were found in the abandoned ice box by a searching party about four hours after their mother, Mrs. Hilda Proctor, had become alarmed because the eldest boy failed to telephone her at work at a prearranged hour.

The door of the refrigerator in the rear of their home apparently had slammed shut on the three boys huddled inside.

Meanwhile, Fairfax County Police yesterday renewed their appeals to county parents to rid their premises of ice boxes and other "hazards" which might cause such accidents.

Uruguay's Embassy Celebrates Unveiling of Hero's Statue

By Marie McNair

AT AN impressive ceremony at noon yesterday, a statue of Jose Artigas, father of Uruguayan Independence, was unveiled with diplomats and dignitaries in attendance. And at a late day party yesterday at the Carlton, the Uruguay Ambassador and Senora de Dominguez-Campora entertained at a large reception to celebrate the event.

The life-size likeness of Uruguay's hero stands in a tiny green triangle at Constitution ave. and 18th st., presented to United States by Uruguayan school children's pennies and an appropriation from Uruguay's Chamber of Deputies.

"Uruguay will always be present wherever the cause of freedom in American Republics is endangered," the Ambassador of Uruguay, who presented the statue, declared.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who accepted the gift in behalf of the United States, described Uruguay as a nation foremost in the ranks of democracy.

"Through the years, we have held steadily to our friendship. This gift has a special meaning. Tell your President, and through him the people of Uruguay, that in this struggle for the minds of the people of the world, we are truly thankful for such an ally," he said.

The Marine Band played: Dr. Alberto Lleras, Secretary General of OAS, made a brief speech of eulogy to the soldier who commanded the victorious Uruguayan forces more than 150 years ago, and Dr. Frederick Brown Harris closed the program with a benediction.

Had Busy Day, Kept Smiling

YES, the Ambassador and Senora de Dominguez Campora had had a busy day. But they took their places with smiling faces promptly at 6 o'clock to greet their several hundred guests. Joining them to make a handsome foursome were Dr. Jose Mora, Uruguay Minister, and in addition, Ambassador to the OAS, and Senora de Mora.

Both ladies looked as though they might have stepped from the pages of Vogue. Senora de Dominguez-Campora wore oyster white satin, street-length, made on straight lines and banded in tiny pearl and crystal beads. From her black calot sprouted a soft trailing feather. Senora de Mora's frock had the slimmest skirt I've seen this season and was worn with a bolero of white organdy and a cloche fashioned of white organdy petals.

By 7 o'clock last night the Carlton Room was packed with few guests making a move to go. There was everything but dancing to make it a Latin fiesta. Buffet tables stretched around three walls with bars interspaced.

Husbands came without wives, and vice versa. The Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani were together. The Danish Ambassador, Henrik de Kauffmann, had bid his wife good-by a few days earlier as she sailed for Europe. Senora de Castro, wife of the El Salvador Ambassador, came without her husband, and Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Canadian Ambassador, was alone too. Saw the Biddles and the Biffles, the Ted Achesons—and Robert Woods Bliss without Mrs. Bliss.

Naval Uniforms Brighten Scene

THERE were lots of crisp white uniforms worn by naval attaches of the Latin American embassies, and lots of summery prints worn by the ladies. Mme. Pandit, Indian Ambassador, wore a sari of pale mauve; Mme. Sastroamidjojo, wife of the Indonesian Ambassador, wore her native costume, a close, straight gown of peacock blue with an embroidered drapery hanging straight over one shoulder.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. O. B. Hardison were there, and among others, Luis Quintanilla, Mexican Ambassador to OAS; Mrs. Karl Mundt, wife of the Senator; Paul Daniels, U. S. Ambassador to OAS, looking through the crowd for Mrs. Daniel's big hat.

And speaking of hats, Mrs. Morris Cafritz wore her now famous number with the big bobbing brim edged in pale yellow velvet pansies.

Caught a glimpse of Representative and Mrs. Karl LeCompte, and the Mexican Ambassaor and Senora de la Colina with Senora de Ledon. The Donald Dawsons and Mrs. John McMillan were together; Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Paul King chatted with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Livesay and in another group were Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young and Dr. Tomas Cajigas.

Still others were Paraguay Ambassador and Senora de Boettner, the senora in pale pink frock with a leghorn poke bonnet; Mrs. Charles G. Ross, Furman Bridges, Admiral and Mrs. W. O. Spears, and the Director General of OAS and Senora de Lleras.

Visitor Guest At Luncheon

EVARISTO SOURDIS, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Colombia, who is spending several days in Washington, was the guest in whose honor Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller jr., entertained at luncheon yesterday at Prospect House.

Senor Sourdis was guest of honor at a large reception on Saturday given by the Colombian Ambassador and Senora Zuleta-Angel.

Ready to Sail For Rio Port

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS, former club editor of The Washington Post, is studying these days at the State Department's Foreign Service Institute, reading for her job as assistant press attache at the United States Embassy in Rio. Sworn in last week, she expects to sail the end of July after two or three days in New York. A member of the Women's Press Club, Miss Reynolds is also a past president of the American Newspaper Women's Club. She's a native of South Carolina but has been in Washington for the last 14 years.

Brides-to-Be Feted at Parties

MR. AND MRS. JOHN F. CROSBY entertained at cocktails yesterday for Miss Anne Distler, daughter of Mrs. Walter Distler, and her finance, William F. Brown 2d, of Montclair, N. J. who will be married on Wednesday in St. Matthew's Cathedral. The 75 or 100 guests were all young people, members of the wedding party and out-of-town friends of the couple here for the wedding.

MISS JOSEPHINE ELIZABETH KNOWLTON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Knowlton, and R. Curtis Jordan, jr., of Columbus, Ga., who will be married Saturday in St. Margaret's Church, are the guests in whose honor Miss Mimi Griffin will entertain at dinner this evening. Miss Griffin, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert M. Griffin, will be a bridesmaid at the wedding.

Mrs. R. L. Morton will give a dinner party Thursday evening for Miss Knowlton, her fiance and members of the bridal party and on Friday the bride-elect will be entertained with her attendants at a luncheon to be given by Miss Edith Scott. Miss Scott will be in the wedding party.

Mrs. M. C. Jennings, sister of Mr. Jordan, will be a bridesmaid.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Curtis Jordan, parents of the prospective bridegroom will entertain at dinner at the Shoreham following the wedding rehearsal Friday night.

Miss Knowlton is a niece of the late Charles Dana Gibson, creator of "The Gibson Girl."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mother of One Child, Now Grown and Married, Is Seared by Remorse at Not Having Had More Children; She Feels Her Life Has Been Wasted

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On reading this letter you may decide that it comes from a neurotic old woman. But whatever you think, please tell me frankly.

I am over 50 years of age, married and the mother of one child who is now married and living in another part of the world. Years ago, shortly after this child was born, my husband and I mutually agreed not to have more children, because I didn't want to go through the experience again. But now I have begun to feel that we both were grossly cheated by that decision.

My husband is perfectly contended, but I am tormented with thoughts of a wasted life, and with fears of having offended God and incurred eternal damnation on my soul. Which is better at my age, to stick to the regretted decision until the fertile years are over? Or throw caution to the winds and possibly bear a child this late in life?

I am a Christian and deeply concerned about my spiritual well being. The only reason I can give for my past policy is a limited financial status and fear of responsibility. Please help me by voicing your opinion of my problem. L. T.

Problem Always Has Been "Fear"

DEAR L. T.: In grooming your letter for publication I've revised your language a bit; but in the original draft you spoke more than once of fears and dangers associated, in your mind, with pregnancy. Owing to these forebodings you decided years ago to limit the size of your family, presumably as an antidote to anxiety.

Now you've reached the fifties, an age at which you've almost outlived cause for defensive concern about the mortal risks of producing a child. But suddenly you find yourself overwhelmed by a fresh onslaught of anxiety, this time having to do, it seems, with fear of eternal damnation to your soul for having denied yourself children in the season of life when normally they are produced.

In short, looking at life and the universe from your state of mind, it seems you can't win in your struggle for freedom from fear, no matter what course you take. You have an anxiety neurosis as a chronic affliction, that dates back to your first years of life, no doubt. And more recently you are suffering the special doldrums usually induced by involutional change, I suppose; and these two depressive factors are giving your nervous system a very bad time.

Don't Panic; See a Doctor

LOOKING back on your regretted policy, it seems sensible to realize that if you had been a healthy personality when you married, you would have given a different, less frightened account of yourself. And as you are a Christian, profoundly disturbed about your eternal welfare, it seems to me you should take refuge in prayer, rather than yield to panic or despair, in the current emotional crisis.

Psychologically or spiritually, you are sick; and in the Epistle of James 5:15 we are told, "The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." Which is in true accord with the teachings of Jesus, Whose acts of healing were acts of infinite compassion also. As He said, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." (Luke 19:10).

Your fitful thoughts of having another child should be discussed with a medical specialist who knows the psychology and physiology of neurotic women your age, and who can give you a reliable estimate of your reproductive potentials, and a doctor's counsel generally. M. H.

DAR Rededicates Cornerstone of Bell Tower

New Faith in American Way Urged

VALLEY FORGE, Pa., June 19.

Reborn faith in our democratic institutions and the American way of life is needed to check the spread of communism in this country, Mrs. James B. Patton, president general, Daughters of the American Revolution, said here today.

Mrs. Patton spoke at a ceremony recommemorating the cornerstone of the Memorial Bell Tower. The tower to be built by D. A. R. funds will house the National Carillon of 49 bells at Valley Forge. It will stand beside the Washington Memorial Chapel.

"If America is to lead the way for the democratic nations in upholding freedom and liberty, it must demonstrate its strong faith in democracy," Mrs. Patton said. "We cannot successfully meet a cold war if we have another cold war going on within our own United States.

MRS. PATTON

"Our faith must be strong. It must be instilled into the hearts of our young Americans by patriotic education. We must show others in our daily lives that we believe in America and have confidence in our form of Government."

The original cornerstone for the tower was laid by Mrs. William H. Pouch of New York City, then president general, in 1944. An additional sealed box containing added records was placed beside the first box and the stone was sealed by Mrs. Pouch and Mrs. Patton today. A special delegation came from Washington for the ceremony.

The great carillon of the chapel has been housed in a wooden structure which has been deemed unsafe. The Memorial bell tower will be constructed of steel and stone and will rise to a height of 95 feet. Among its memorials will be an honor roll containing the names of soldiers of the Revolutionary War and of World War I and World War II.

Fall Fashion Forecast:

Furs Coming in Rainbow Hues

By Peggy Preston

YOU CAN take your furs in big or small doses this year, and in practically any color of the rainbow.

Such is the fashion picture for the coming season as revealed here yesterday by two men who help set the fur styles of the nation. They are Jack Zimmerman, designer for Zimmerman-Scher of New York, and Harold Gibbs of Hollander & Sons, a firm engaged in dyeing and proeessing of furs. Both were guest speakers at the luncheon given at the Raleigh Hotel by the Fur Division of the Merchants and Manufacturers of Washington.

Changing Silhouette

Mr. Zimmerman divided his forecast into three parts: He predicts a changing silhouette, the growing importance of color, and a vogue for small furs.

Today's fashion silhouette, stressing the vertical line, completes a cycle begun in 1936 when Schiaparelli introduced the squared-off shoulder, according to the designer. We are now in the process of developing a normal, natural outline, with soft shoulders, shortened skirts.

Fur fashions will follow this general trend and style points to look for this fall include small, stand-up and rolled front collars; hemlines at 12 to 14 inches from the floor; a minimum amount of shoulder padding; and sleeves open at the wrist with a variety of turned back cuffs.

Any length that suits your fancy is permitted. Newest notion, according to Mr. Zimmerman, is that the hemline be one inch shorter than the skirt of your dress. All the shorter lengths will be considered smart, and there should be slight flare, to balance the slim, vertical line of suit or dress.

Colored furs are here to stay, in the opinion of Mr. Zimmerman, and we will see more and more of them in the coming years. He pointed to the progress made in breeding mutation mink, and to the great strides made by the dyers.

"It is now possible for a woman to go into a fur shop and ask for a coat to match the color of her dress," he declared. "Nine times out of ten, she can find one."

The rising popularity of small furs is one of the most important phases of the fur fashion picture. These pieces, such as short capes, stoles, scarf, neckpieces of all shapes and sizes, have become an established part of the feminine wardrobe. Because of them, women are now wearing furs the year round.

Mr. Gibbs, in discussing the development of colored furs, pointed out that before the war we had only four basic colors—black, brown, gray and white. Experimenting with Persian lamb, dyers first produced a dark blue, named midnight blue-black. Then came tints of green, burgundy, beige and all the other bright, gay shades seen in today's fur garments.

Federation Head Outlines Plans

By Norma Lanum

A RED-HAIRED grandmother from the corn belt of the Nation yesterday proposed several new lines of action for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which has a membership of 10 million women throughout the world.

In her first press conference yesterday since she took office three weeks ago, Mrs. Hiram Cole Houghton of Red Oak, Iowa, told of her plans to attract industrial women into the ranks of the club and to study business and investments, and old age. And she even offered a plan of "exchanging women" between this country and other parts of the world as a peace means.

Mrs. Houghton announced a new division within the Federation's Public Affairs Department to enlist members from industrial groups.

The industrial division, headed by Mrs. C. Whitfield Gowrie of Hamden, Conn., will study the needs of factory workers and then determine just what assistance the federation can give them.

"These women have the same love for art and things as we do," spoke the president. She said the clubs in industrial localities might be able to arrange evening meetings which the workers could attend."

MRS. HIRAM C. HOUGHTON
... outlines new plan

Study on Age To Prove Useful

ANOTHER innovation in the federation's program is the new living later years division of the welfare department. The new president hopes that this group can conduct an institute on gerantology with the University of Michigan to study more useful ways to spend old age.

"I'm sure more than half of the federation's membership will be interested in this study," the president smiled.

In addition the new president is working on an "exchange of women" plan between federation members in other parts of the world.

Through "organized hospitality" clubwomen from the United States could trade places with those from Europe, for example, for a few months. That way, women of other countries could learn to appreciate our way of life and we theirs, according to Mrs. Houghton. She's already begun consultations with the State Department on this idea.

Another project in the offing is a committee of business research to be directed by Mrs. Ambrose Diehl of San Francisco, Calif. The committee will work with the banks, insurance companies and investors in a study of money management. "After all, women control over 85 percent of the country's wealth," says the president.

Hopes to Arrange Radio Program

ALSO, Mrs. Houghton expects to go to New York City next month to negotiate with the major radio networks for a regular weekly, or maybe a daily radio program for the federation.

She says she's already received several bids for a forum-type during morning hours on issues of special interest to housewives.

But before going to New York Mrs. Houghton will make at least one more visit to her home town. She's to be honored at an all-day celebration there Friday. The day's been set aside by the local citizenry as D-Day—"that's for Dorothy, my first name," the president explains. And everyone from the Iowa Governor on down is expected to pay her tribute.

Mrs. Houghton has long been a favorite of Iowa. She belongs to more clubs and societies than you can count on two hands and was chosen "Iowa Mother of 1948-49."

Family Always "Generous" With Her

SHE'S short and plump, "generous" with her spontaneous, throaty laugh and she calls folks around her "dear."

Mrs. Houghton is the daughter of a former justice of the Iowa Supreme Court. Her mother was a clubwoman before her. She, herself, is a mother of four and a grandmother of six.

How does her family feel about all this club work? "Oh, they've always been very generous with me," she comments. On her return from a junket to Europe August 28 to October 3 with about 25 other federation members, her husband is going to take an apartment in Washington. The federation president must maintain residence in the Capital and "I just couldn't let him stay way out in Iowa. I've got the handsomest, nicest husband there is!"

While the clubwomen take their European trip, an annual event which is being resumed this year for the first time since the war, the headquarters on N st. will be redecorated throughout. That's right! Another new plan of the president's.

Mrs. Houghton wants the old row house to be restored to a "very livable" clubhouse where members can entertain "foreign delegates, Congressmen's wives, et cetera."

Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar Rosenthal have opened their summer home in Chambersburg, Pa., and will be there until fall.

Daughter of Admiral Wed To Commander

Alicia Ghormley Woods and Comdr. William C. F. Robards, U. S. Navy were married yesterday morning at the Navy Chapel in the presence of members of their families. Capt. Ernest L. Ackiss, Chaplains Corps, U. S. Navy, officiated.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Doreen Millett of Washington. Comdr. Lloyd Mustin, a Naval Academy classmate of the bridegroom, was best man.

Mrs. Robards is the daughter of Vice Admiral and Mrs. Robert Lee Ghormley. Commander Robards is the son of Mrs. Robards of Washington and the late Col. Frank Fitzhugh Robards, U. S. Marines.

Commander and Mrs. Robards left immediately after the ceremony for a brief honeymoon in New England before Commander Robards takes command of the USS Adria in July.

Kathleen Kelly, Margaret Martin, To Become Brides

Representative and Mrs. Augustine B. Kelley of Greensburg, Pa., and Washington, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Kathleen Anne, to Robert Warren Schellenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Schellenberg of Arlington, Va., formerly of New York.

Miss Kelley is a graduate of Georgetown Visitation Convent and Catholic University of America. Mr. Schellenberg was graduated from the University of Notre Dame. He served in the Navy during the war.

Dr. and Mrs. Theodore D. Martin of Chevy Chase, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Edsall, to Warren D. McPherson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Dwight McPherson of Batavia, N. Y.

Miss Martin will be a senior at Cornell University next year. Mr. McPherson was graduated from Cornell in June, 1948.

Navy Mothers Clubs Hold Convention, See Minstrel Show

The Navy Mothers Clubs of America, celebrating the twentieth anniversary of their founding, opened a five-day convention last night with a meeting and a minstrel show.

Special guests at the meeting included the Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews; Mrs. Emma Jones of McAllen, Tex., who founded the clubs, and Col. Waldron E. Leonard, coordinator of Veterans Affairs for the District of Columbia, and Lieut. Comdr. Harold Willis, winner of the Washington Post's "Ideal Father" contest. The minstrel show was staged by the Philadelphia Club, No. 73.

Registration began yesterday morning. Over 800 delegates and visitors from several hundred clubs have already registered, with another 200 expected. All meetings are being held at the Mayflower Hotel.

The members of the executive board were luncheon guests of Mrs. Charles Peterson, national commander, yesterday.

Today's program includes a luncheon at which Representative Frances Bolton and Gen. F. R. Kerr, chairman of the national advisory committee of the Veterans' Administration, will speak.

The opening business session will be at 9 a. m. today. The luncheon, sponsored by the Virginia clubs with Mrs. J. C. Leslie of Roanoke as chairman, will be at 12:30 p. m., followed by an afternoon business meeting. Memorial services will be held at 8 p. m. with Mrs. Martha McAllister of Wheeling, W. Va., as chairman and the Toledo Navy Mothers Club drill team participating.

A pilgrimage to Arlington Cemetery will be made Wednesday morning at which time a plaque will be presented in commemoration of the Unknown Soldier and a wreath will be laid at the tomb. A banquet, at which Gen. Samuel L. Howard, USMC, will speak, will be held Wednesday evening with the Maryland clubs as hostesses under the chairmanship of Mrs. Amelia A. Cilento of Baltimore. General Howard is president of the Naval Examining Board, USMC, and also president of the Marine Corps Reserve Examining Board.

Election and installation of officers will be held Thursday. The convention will conclude with a business meeting Friday morning.

Texas Stars at Theater

Members of the Texas State Society and their friends are to be shown a special performance of Charles Hoyt's "A Texas Steer" on June 20 at the Cross Roads Barn Theater, Baileys Cross Roads, Va., where the play is currently running.

1000 Women At Maryland Taking Course

More than one thousand Maryland farm women have registered for the University of Maryland's annual "short course" for rural women—a week-long program of lectures, speeches and cultural activities which got under way yesterday.

Highlight of this morning's sessions will be a speech by Assistant Secretary of State John D. Hickerson. There will follow short lessons on flower arrangement, fashions, child guidance, public speaking, home furnishings and nutrition.

Friday 144 women will receive certificates for completing the four-year Rural Women's Short Course, and 23 homemakers will receive pins marking their attendance of the course for the past eight years.

Blue Jeans Might Not Make Best Curtains, but Modern Denims Are Tough and Sturdy, Defy the Sun

DEAR ANNE:

I am considering the use of denim to curtain the large windows of a new house. Blue denim, I know, is subject to fading. Can you tell me whether other colors, lemon yellow, for instance, would hold up well in a Southern exposure? Any suggestions which you can give me on inexpensive and durable fabrics for curtaining large areas would be appreciated. J. G. S., Washington.

When you speak of blue denim fading, I wonder if you're thinking of the well-known jeans? They do lose color with repeated scrubbing in strong soaps. But the de luxe, modern denim fabrics sold primarily for use in women's playclothes are reasonably color-fast. Although not guaranteed against fading, they do wear well, as any sun-worshiper with a denim outfit will testify. So-called 'faded blue' denim is actually a stable light blue dye, and not especially prone to change. Stores here report that they sell quite a lot of denim for curtains, by the way.

Other comparatively inexpensive fabrics which can be used effectively for draperies include Indianhead, dune cloth, unbleached muslin, osnaberg and ticking. Indianhead IS guaranteed color-fast and comes in luscious hues. It is an exceptionally sturdy fabric—strong enough for slipcovers, too. Dune cloth is a novelty hopsacking used this year in playclothes, and has a pleasant rough texture.

Osnaberg, which is one of the cheapest and strongest of all decorator's fabrics (it is used industrially for cement sacks), comes only in the natural cream shade, although it takes dye well. Its big advantage is that it doesn't have to be ironed. For some reason, it's hard to buy in Washington now. But one shop expecting a shipment can be reached at Hobart 3657.

Mattress ticking makes clever, sophisticaed curtains for certain types of interior and teams well with ball fringe. But it might be overpowering if your curtain area is large in proportion to the other furnishings.

PETUNIA!

I pour my jam
And cuss my stars
—There's more on the stove

Use your gravy boat, Petunia —like this!

DEAR ANNE:

I have just bought an electric roaster with a beautiful chromium top. My neighbor's roaster top became mottled and darkened, so won't you please tell me how to keep mine bright?

Mrs. E. C., Riverdale, Md.

The chromium top shouldn't become discolored if you're careful about wiping it off with a damp cloth (soap, too, if necessary) after each use. When grease or food becomes stuck to the surface, use a scratchless cleansing powder to remove it. After washing, rinse by wiping with cloth wrung out of clear water and dry thoroughly.

DEAR ANNE:

My kitchen curtains are glazed chintz. How can I remove grease spots before they are washed?

M. F. RICE,
N4800 23d st. So. Arlington

If the grease spots aren't too bad, they'll probably come out with ordinary soap and water washing. However, you could sponge them with dry cleaning fluid before laundering if you wish. Place a pad of absorbant cloth under stain on right side to catch grease as you sponge on wrong side of cloth.

Here's a warning: Even though the chintz curtains have a permanent glaze, launder them gently. Glaze is a surface, and damaged by rough treatment.

SPAGHETTI CASSEROLE

Ingredients: 9 ounces spaghetti, ¼ cup finely diced green pepper, 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 3 tablespoons flour, 2 cups milk, 2 cups thin strips cooked ham, salt and pepper, buttered tiny cubes soft bread.

Method: Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender; drain. Cook green pepper in butter or margarine over low heat until almost soft, stirring often. Add flour and mix well. Add milk gradually and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Pour over the spaghetti, add ham and salt and pepper to taste. Turn into baking dish, cover with buttered bread cubes and bake in a moderately hot (375 F.) oven about 25 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

One on the Aisle—

We're Looking Like A Hollywood Set

By Richard L. Coe

THE TOWN'S beginning to look like a movie set.

Judy Holiday and William Holden were shooting scenes yesterday afternoon at the Jefferson Memorial for "Born Yesterday" and today Louis Calhern makes up as Oliver Wendell Holmes for "The Magnificent Yankee' scenes on the front steps of the Capitol.

Miss Holiday had several costume changes for her Jefferson Memorial scenes, which probably marks the first time a lady has been allowed to change from thisa to thata in that majestic edifice. Away from the cameras, she just disappeared. Where, Miss H?

But the obliging Holden is a chap I'd long wanted to meet. Apart from being my idea of the best of the younger actors (remember "The Dark Past"?), he's also a vice president of the Screen Actors Guild, the husband of that lovely Brenda Marshall and, as the father to three children, was in the news a while ago for an extremely intelligent act.

Because you've seen him in so many pictures from that starring role debut in "Golden Boy" on through "Dear Wife" and "Miss Grant Takes Richmond," you could pick him out of a crowd anywhere, though he's neither sensationally goodlooking nor the least bit actorish. He's an immensely relaxed fellow, brown-haired, blue-eyed and, in yesterday afternoon's humidity, commanded enough respect from a lightweight summer suit to keep it from creasing.

He's interested in how "Sunset Boulevard" will be received. This is the Charles Brackett-Billy Wilder story of a passee screen star in which Gloria Swanson does such a sensational job, as does Holden.

"Brackett and Wilder always confound the front office," Bill points out. "They did a realistic study of a drunk that nobody thought would go. That was 'The Lost Weekend.' Then they did a yarn about the black market of Berlin. They called it 'Foreign Affair,' and it clicked. Now they've got an older woman in love with a young man. That's what has people uncertain about 'Sunset Boulevard.'"

(Having already seen Gloria's splendid picture, I'd like to sneak one of Pearsons Predictions to say ahead of time that this one should also set Holden's stock to the pinnacle. He's cracklingly fine in it.)

The extra-curricular activities for the actors' Guild and other Hollywood organizations take too much time from family life, Bill finds. "When you work 60 hours a week at the studio and spend another 20 attending meetings and working on reports, you don't have the time you should for your family."

That news item about family life concerned Bill's collection of rifles and firearms. He'd had it for years and no doubt picked up more while he was an Army officer during the war. But, with youngsters around the house, he has wisely junked the lot. Think of the fathers whose similar action might have saved many a home from tragedy.

'Somebody's Got to Do It'

The intricate problems of studio-union relationships, complicated by frozen foreign assets and picture-shooting abroad, are well within the grasp of this intelligent actor. Along with Ronald Reagan and Gene Kelly, he found after the war that somebody had to take a part in labor relations and that they were elected.

He sees television as the dominant of entertainment's future and, the difference in problems faced by TV actors and those working for film and kinescope broadcasting.

But though he can talk more intelligibly about such than your reporter can compactly discuss them, Holden puts his acting career first. He's enthusiastic over the idea "Born Yesterday" will get across in the midst of its sharp comedy and he's hoping people will like "Sunset Boulevard."

In the stand-around-and-wait atmosphere of movie-making on location, Holden stacked up as just the sort of fellow who represents the best of the movie world, intelligent, attractive, friendly and a master of his profession.

METRO'S "The Magnificent Yankee" group finds their star, Louis Calhern, on the screen of both the Capitol and the Palace . . . In the former he's the sly, wicked lawyer involved in a gem robbery, in the latter he's Buffalo Bill Cody to Betty Hutton's Annie Oakley . . . Director John Sturges, like Holden, was involved with Army and Air Force films during the war and his more recent films include "The Walking Hills," "The Best Man Wins" and "The Sign of the Ram." . . . He's hoping to get his Washington shots filmed within three days, weather permitting, after which back to Culver City . . . Too bad that Justice Holmes' I st. home was torn down too soon to take its role in the film.

PAULETTE GODDARD had a night off from Olney's "Caesar and Cleopatra" last night and dined in regal state at Olmstead's in the union struggles that now occupy actors of TV, he recognizes in G st., with photographers, orchids and three-inch steaks on tap . . . Wouldn't be surprised if Paulette's picture soon will grace that celebrity-chocked menu cover in Washington's end of the Olmstead-Luchow axis . . . Two more theaters have just been added for the "C & C" summer barnstorming . . . Final performance at Olney is next Saturday night; no Sunday performances this week only.

EVE ARDEN got off the train yesterday afternoon to be greeted by segments of Central High, all bearing apples for the teacher . . . The youngsters are fans of her radio serial about that resourceful teacher, "Our Miss Brooks," having, such is their youthful misfortune, missed Eve's merry pranks in "Very Warm for May," which spoofed the very sort of thing Eve's doing right now: summer theaters . . . Director Harry Ellerbe starts rehearsing her in "Over 21" this morning.

'Carmen' Has a Praiseworthy Performance at Watergate

By Paul Hume

Rained out Friday night "Carmen" reached the Watergate stage last night for the first of two performances this week.

There was plenty to praise in the San Carlo version of the popular French opera, and a good deal that could have been much better.

On the credit side was the singing of the Carmen, Margery Mayer, her tenor lover, Don Jose sung by Vasso Argyris, and young Micaela, Leona Scheunemann. These three know the style and mood of Bizet's score and project it with power and dramatic inflection.

Mayer has made the entire role of Carmen a thing of such subtle yet fiery passion that she makes it live as few singers can today. Her excellences are both vocal and theatrical. She has no shortcomings in the part, and won praise from her audience in recognition of her work.

Miss Scheunemann has a larger voice than one generally hears in the soprano part, but she handles it with beautiful control. With her gifts, she takes the rather pale character and gives her proper place in the total music drama. In her two acts, notably in her strong handling of act three, she restored Bizet's original mood to Micaela.

Argyris has sung Jose here three years in succession. His voice is resonant, and he gives the taxing lines with the sweep they need. He has freed his tones from former tensions, but still needs to imbue them with more sensuous color.

Anton Marco disappointed those who were excited by his singing on Saturday night. As Escamillo, he found the Toreador Song an occasion for forcing his voice to almost constant sharptness; in later passages he showed some of the control that first won him applause.

But "Carmen" depends on so much more than a few principals. Last night, the settings were fine for three of the four acts, but the inn of Lillas Pastia in act two could not make its effect against the same street scene as act one. All of act two lacked precision from chorus, most of the principals, and in the dancing. We hope that before Saturday's repetition there will be a stiff general rehearsal for everyone.

Act three completely reversed things, and proved an immense success. "Carmen" is too great an opera to be allowed to slip into a humdrum level. It should move throughout as it did in its best moments last night.

Tonight: "Aida," with Ribla, Mayer, Granda, Marco.

Meat Price Inquiry Is Asked in Resolution

A congressional investigation of meat prices was proposed yesterday by Representative Tauriello (D., N. Y.).

He introduced a resolution to set up a seven-man special House committee to make the study. His resolution said "the pattern" of meat price increases "suggests the possibility that conspiracy and other forces are responsible."

He proposed giving the committee $50,000 to make the investigation.

Justice Dept. Quiz In Lustron Affairs Promised Judge

Columbus, Ohio, June 19 (U.P.)—The Department of Justice today promised a Federal investigation of $36,500,000 in loans and the operation of the bankrupt Lustron prefabricated housing concern here.

The announcement was made to Federal Judge Mell G. Underwood by James O'Brien and William Delaney, representatives of the Department of Justice, after a long meeting with the judge in his chambers.

"All evidence indicating criminal aspects is going to be investigated fully and completely and such action taken by the Department of Justice as the facts warrant," the statement issued by O'Brien and Delaney said.

The Lustron firm was sold at auction to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation earlier this month for six million dollars. RFC previously had lent the plant and its former president, Carl G. Strandlund, 36 million dollars, none of which was repaid.

Two Newsmen Given GOP Publicity Posts

James C. Austin, Washington news correspondent, and Robert Guill, former Navy public information officer, were appointed yesterday to the public relations staff of the Republican National Committee.

Austin, 44, a native of Port Chester, N. Y., has been a United Press reporter for more than 20 years, serving in Washington, Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco and New York.

Guill, 39, was a lieutenant commander in the Navy and for the past four years worked as a civilian in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in Japan.

Yugoslavian Envoy Meets With Acheson

Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Yugoslav Ambassador Vladimir Popovic discussed Yugoslavia's economic problems for 30 minutes yesterday.

Popovic called to present his credentials. He declined to say whether a new American loan to Yugoslavia was mentioned.

Popovic, former Yugoslav envoy to Moscow, succeeds Sava N. Kosanovic, who was recalled to Belgrade to be a close adviser to Marshall Tito.

Slack Being Moved For Knoxville Hearing

Utica, N. Y., June 19 (AP).—United States Marshal Gerald K. Nellis said tonight that Alfred Dean Slack would be transferred tomorrow to Knoxville, Tenn., for a hearing on an espionage charge.

Federal Judge James T. Foley signed a removal order in Albany today, permitting the transfer. Slack was arrested by FBI agents last Thursday in Syracuse.

NORTHWEST PARK APARTMENTS
Offers Private Living Similar to Your Own Home
On New Hampshire Ave. Extended, North of University Lane

Ready for Immediate Occupancy

EXAMINE THESE FEATURES. COMPARE THEM WITH OTHER APARTMENTS, AND BE AMAZED!
1. Private entrances, and broad, private, terraces for family living, face a whole mile of cool, wooded parkland.
2. Twenty individual spacious layouts of one, two, and three-bedroom units, some with bedrooms upstairs.
3. An unusual roadway system provides safety for children, with one-way traffic, and brings the car to your own front door.
4. Almost half the units are end units, with sun, air and long views on three sides.
5. Masonry walls between units provide complete soundproofing.
6. Stair-climbing reduced to a minimum, as private entrances (70 per cent of total) enter directly at ground level.

Crisis at the Border

The four great strategic materials in any war are uranium, oil, newsprint and blood. In the cold war, far and away the most important is newsprint . . . In the world's diplomatic circles Canada and the United States are regarded not only as allies but as inseparable partners. Any breach between them is regarded as unthinkable—the surest formula for national suicide for them both. But the unthinkable is on the verge of happening . . . Ottawa is very angry and Washington is bridling over the question of newsprint—the biggest international trade in the world. These are the facts:

A ton of newsprint is enough to cover a two-lane highway 16 feet wide and 10 miles long. Many United States dailies use over 50,000 tons a year—enough to pave a two lane highway around the world 20 times! . . . The newspaper consumption of New York City alone is staggering. The Daily News and the Daily Mirror, the two largest circulations—together use enough newsprint to paper, every year, a two lane highway four million miles long . . . To put its issue on the streets the New York Times uses 40 to 50 acres of forest every day. American newspapers, every year, use enough forest to make a mark on the world's map, 2000 square miles. That's the equivalent of a strip of forest about 3½ miles wide running from New York to Chicago . . . In short, Mr. and Mrs. America read each year a newspaper 16 feet wide and 42,500,000 miles long, printed in the United States and made in Canada.

A newsprint-making machine is one of the biggest machines ever invented by man and now cost about four million dollars. One of these machines is a factory in itself. The big ones are over 100 yards long and 50 to 60 feet high . . . A machine of this size turns out 400 miles of paper a day in a strip 20 feet wide. This will give you an idea of the size of our free press . . . Incredibly, Canada produces in a year enough newsprint to pave 80 four-lane highways to the moon—and more incredibly, the United States complains it's not enough!

These are the issues: A U. S. Congressional committee charges that Canada is restricting supply; Canada answers that she has increased her production 600,000 tons in the last four years—equivalent to a 66 2/3 percent expansion of total United States production. The United States charges that Canadian mills have fixed a price at $100 a ton . . . Canada answers that they can sell it at a higher price in the world market, and Canada sold it to us at $96 a ton—when the United States Army was paying the Russians and Germans $192 a ton for newsprint of lesser quality . . . The United States states that 500 million dollars is a lot of money to pay for newsprint. Canada says that two billion dollars is a lot to pay for the American products she buys every year. The one thing the argument has established is that we are each other's best customer, and no other two countries do nearly as much business together . . . So much for the economic background.

The diplomatic background is where the game gets tough. Last year it took the President of the United States and the Canadian Prime Minister to settle it. Then it was comparatively easy—because the Justice Dept. is under the direct control of the President, as an Executive Department. This year it is the Congress—and Congressmen, unlike Attorneys General, are not subject to orders from the President . . . Now, the honor—meaning the sovereignty of both nations—is involved. This is the wrangle:

The Dep't of Justice last year, and Congress this year, threatens to issue subpoenas for the Canadian companies . . . The Canadian Embassy has pointed out that the serving of U. S. subpenas in Canada would be a violation of Canadian sovereignty. Diplomatically, of course, this means they have told us to take our United States Marshals and go to Hell. The Canadians have told us officially and icily that Canadian companies are complying with Canadian Law, and it is none of our damned business, anyway . . . We have answered that they can manufacture newsprint in Canada in any way they please, but we will damn well tell them how they are going to sell it in the United States.

It is a grim hour when statesmen call upon their armies for action; it is even grimmer when the armies call upon their statesmen for diplomacy . . . The men most worried about the crisis are not sitting in the State Department, Capitol Hill or even the White House. They are in the Pentagon and Canadian Army Headquarters . . . Far more than the Canadian or the American people realize—they are one nation militarily . . . For example, Canadian Marines were in our Caribbean maneuvers. The Royal Canadian Air Force is assigned the defense of New York City and has gone through battle maneuvers over the city in Operation Metropolis.

Some of the top diplomats of both countries do not know it yet, but if necessary, the Chiefs of Staff of both nations will respectfully but insistently demand of their respective governments that the crisis be dissolved—and it must be . . . Their reason is as simple as the oldest military maxim in the world: necessity is above the gods themselves . . . Conceding that there are two sides to every story, Canadian and American military men point out, nevertheless, that there is only one front against a common enemy . . . In short, no matter who is right, the fight is wrong . . . Bitterly, they say that though American and Canadian businessmen and diplomats appear to be unable to be partners in life, they expect Canadian and American boys to be partners again, if necessary, in death.

Ottawa and Washington recognize the danger of spreading fire. The highest echelons in both governments are working toward a solution. This reporter has reason to believe the crisis will be solved, if necessary, by the Commanders-in-Chief themselves.

Newsprint—in strategic terms—is called the white blood of the cold war. But in a hot war, it is red blood that counts . . . That is why the Pentagon thinks the only thing more important than a forest of trees for newsprint is a forest of first class fighting men—with Canadia's Maple Leaf on their shoulder. In final illumination of their point, the United States Air Force and the Royal Canadian Air Force are in joint maneuvers right now in Operation Northwest for the dual defense of Vancouver and Seattle. And, as the military men sardonically remark, there are no borders in a pool of North American blood.

Truman Whiz At the Piano, Says Breeskin

They may laugh when Harry Truman sits down at the piano.

They don't know that "at the keyboard, the President shows he's boss."

According to this week's Look Magazine, Mr. Truman "won't take any nonsense from the piano." The words of praise and criticism for the President's piano artistry come from Shoreham Hotel band leader Barnee Breeskin, and are quoted by Jack Wilson of Look's Washington bureau.

Breeskin contends Mr. Truman combines properly rigid wrists, excellent fingering and a minimum of piano stool gymnastics.

The President is in top form when he plays Paderewski's Minuet, Breeskin says.

"Usually Truman's pedal work on crescendos isn't awfully good. He doesn't use the loud pedal enough to get real power."

"But in the Minuet—when the President goes to work on it—that crescendo in the second movement is terrific.

"A man who can play like that shouldn't even bother picking around at something like the Missouri Waltz," the bandleader declared.

Father Tries To Kill Tots At Gas Jets

Fredericksburg, Va., June 19 (AP). Clarence E. Garnett, 38-year-old roofing worker, was in City Jail here today charged with attempting to kill his two children by holding them in front of the opened jets of a gas stove. One child is 19 months old, the other 3 years.

A. G. Kendall, superintendent of Fredericksburg police, told this story:

Mrs. Ruby Garnett, wife of the man under arrest, was ordered from their home by her husband. She told police her husband locked the doors. A sister attempted to enter, then called police.

When police arrived at the Garnett home, Garnett was holding the two children in front of the jets of the gas stove in the kitchen. When Garnett saw police, he flashed a knife and threatened to cut the throat of the smaller child if police attempted to thwart him. While one policeman distracted Garnett's attention, another knocked the knife from his hand.

Kendall said the children were not hurt.

Romulo Says a Free Asia Can Stop Another War

Detroit, June 19 (U.P.).—Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, president of the Fourth United Nations General Assembly, said today that free nations in Asia have the moral power to prevent another war.

He told the Rotary International that "properly generated and effectively expressed, the moral power of more than 630 million people united for peace can tip the scales, now perilously balanced, against war and in favor of peace."

$5000 Awarded To Child, 8, Hurt By Woman's Car

Linda Lee Klee, 8, yesterday was awarded $5000 in District Court for injuries suffered in a traffic accident August 26, 1948. Her father, Comdr. William M. Klee, of Los Alamos, N. Mex., received $2000 for expenses.

The defendants were Frances Sherman, 1319 Gallatin st. nw., driver of the car which struck the child in an alley, and Mildred C. Sherman, owner of the automobile.

The award was by consent judgment before Judge Richmond B. Keech. Attorneys for the child were Alvin L. Newmyer, sr and jr.

Railway Wins Trestle Fight In Alexandria

Richmond, Va., June 19 (AP).—The Virginia Supreme Court today dismissed a case in which the Washington and Old Dominion Railroad was fined $10 for violating a zoning ordinance of the City of Alexandria.

In reversing an Alexandria Corporation Court verdict, Justice Willis D. Miller said, "We are . . . led to the inescapable conclusion that the evidence falls far short of proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the right of way has been in fact zoned."

The railroad was convicted of violating the zoning ordinance by erecting a coal trestle on its right of way.

Justice Miller pointed out that the Supreme Court was not unmindful of the fact that the railroad was convicted by a jury and its verdict approved by the trial court.

Yet, he added, "There is no conflict in the testimony," and said that a zonng map introduced in evidence "definitely fails to establish to the exclusion of any other reasonable hypothesis an actual zoning of all areas in the city."

Trade Pact Completed

The Ad Adjectives Are Getting Sissy

—By John Crosby—

I'VE been listening to and looking at commercials again with my usual open-mouthed wonder. I wander around the world of advertising pretty much like Alice wanders around Wonderland, neither of us quite believing any of it but not quite disbelieving it, either.

I've been struck lately by the word "mild." All the cigarette people are boasting about the mildness of their cigarettes. I don't question these claims. Being the perfect target for an adman, I believe implicitly that all brands of cigarettes are milder than all other brands. But I keep wondering why the cigarette people—or the rest of us, for that matter—are so convinced that mildness is a virtue in a smoke.

The time was when a man insisted on a good strong cigar. I'd like to have seen anyone sell my grandfather a mild cigar. Grandfather used to boast that his cigars could knock a horse down at 10 feet. We're becoming a Nation of sissies.

Now this mildness thing has stepped into the whisky ads. Joe Doakes' whisky is milder than anyone else's whisky. Who wants to drink a mild whisky, anyhow? The dictionary defines mild as "gentle, soothing, bland, moderate." Does that describe any whisky you ever drank? With the price of whisky where it is, who's gonna buy the stuff if it hasn't any more effect than Coca-Cola, which is a lot cheaper?

How to Amage

I ALSO question the wisdom of another line which fascinates admen. "It's amazing, but it's true"—a line that has been shooting out of my loudspeaker for years. Now if an adman really wanted to amaze me, he'd change his pace now and then and throw out something like this: "You'll be left completely unmoved, but the facts, discounting for a certain amount of bias on our part, are . . ." And then into the free trial offer. An announcement like that would bring me straight out of my chair, amazement written all over me.

Some years back, one of the soaps sponsored a commercial which went, as I recall, like this: "Blotso brings new freshness to old pores. Literally takes years off your complexion. As one satisfied customer wrote us: 'My smile is 20 percent more radiant since I use Blotso.' Yes, Blotso actually removes those wrinkles . . ." And on and on. The one claim this soap did not make was that it got the dirt off.

At the time, I suggested rather diffidently that this ad be reworded, not so much in the interest of accuracy but simply to exploit a brand new angle in soap salesmanship, to something like this: "Blotso removes the filth from small children, washes adults reasonably clean and unsticks stuck windows. It's also useful in washing out the mouths of profane urchins. It tastes awful." The suggestion was not followed.

Potent Timepieces

LATELY I've been bewitched by the wristwatch commercials on television. One of them shows a man kissing a girl who's almost devouring him. "How does a guy rate an embrace like this?" asks the announcer. It develops that he rates it because of his embraceable watch. Or maybe her embraceable watch. Something like that.

The watch—if I understand this thing correctly—acts as an aphrodisiac on anyone of the opposite sex for miles around. Well, of course, it has been steadily hinted for years that various brands of toothpaste, deodorants and soaps are really love potions in disguise. But I think that ascribing these powers to a wristwatch is carrying the thing too far.

The same watch, incidentally, in another TV ad shows Bert Parks, the "Stop the Music" man, taking a shower, wearing his watch. "Can your watch take a shower?" inquires Mr. Parks.

My dear sir, my watch not only can take a shower; it goes for a 2-mile swim in the ocean every day. This summer I plan to enter my watch in the Channel competition. Can your watch swim the English Channel, Mr. Parks?

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

'It Takes All Kinds to Make a World'

The milk strike caused great inconvenience in most Washington families. But some District Liners didn't suffer much.

Sunday evening two men sat drinking beer at an adjoining cafe table as we were eating our dinner. After a while, they were joined by a newcomer who announced: "They've just settled the milk strike."

"That's good," yawned one of the beer drinkers. "I was wondering whether we'd have to do without eggnog for New Years."

HE ADMIRED DOC'S TASTE IN CLOTHES

The home of Dr. Cyrus Katzen of 4601 17th st. nw. was ransacked by a burglar recently.

Shortly afterward, our alert Police Department nabbed a suspect and asked Dr. Katzen to drop down to headquarters to see whether he could identify his stolen property.

Doc took one look at the fellow, recognized the familiar lines of his hat, jacket, pants, shoes and extra loud sport shirt, and gasped:

"Is that me, or him?"

MISCELLANY

When I printed that psychiatry cartoon ("A very difficult case. Have you tried writing to Mary Haworth?") by Isadore Parker, I commented that his work seemed good enough for the national magazines. Small wonder. Cody Pfanstiehl tells me that Parker is the lad who for many months has been drawing the cartoons for WTOP's amusing full-page ads in Broadcasting Magazine, "bible" of the radio industry . . . TWA and Arrow Ties worked out a clever deal for Father's Day—a "Travelogue Tie" depicting airplanes and foreign scenes. It's still selling well in the men's shops . . . Richard Battey of 20 Old Glebe Rd., Arlington, Va., says we'll never have an end to arguments about taxi zone rates, and might as well "get up to date here in Washington" and switch to metered cabs . . . Bolton and Lilian House of 4500 Edmunds st. nw. got a chuckle as they passed New Mexico and Nebraska aves. the other day. The church chimes were pealing out "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair" . . . Burly Lou Aiken, who is built like the late Babe Ruth, is worried about how his legs will look when they dress him up in Colonial costume for the Capitol Theater's Fourth of July week show . . . Charles P. McDonnell of Unit B, Ward 246, Glenn Dale Sanatorium, Glenn Dale, Md., is looking for a small radio, with or without earphones . . . Laura F. Hardin of 2400 16th st. nw. adds a postscript to my line about frank people. She asks: "Have you ever noticed that frank people never like other frank people?" . . . Chicago Cub Rooter Edward Holt of 70 Webster st. ne. enters a bitter complaint about the standings published in a recent edition of this newspaper. The Braves on that day had an average of .5106, but were listed above the Cubs, who were .5111 . . . That's what comes of letting newspaper guys monkey around with fractions and decimals . . . A Virginia ave. filling station still displays a sign offering a big "Christmas Special on Tires."

IT'S A MESS

Personal nomination for the worst traffic area in Washington: Minnesota ave. ne. and its intersection with Benning rd.

PERSONAL NOTES

Judith F. Gingsberg, 105 E. Uhler ave., Alexandria, Va.: The two items of yours that were printed here definitely qualify you for active membership in the District Liners. Secretary Maxine Boyd will see that you're invited to meetings hereafter.

LINES ABOUT LANES

Al Mapou of 1841 Summit pl. nw. calls attention to the sign which confronts motorists driving out of Rock Creek Park toward Massachusetts ave. It says:

Use Both Lanes
Between 4 and 6:30 P. M.

Al observes that some drivers take the sign too literally, and that perhaps "either" lane would have been a better choice of words.

SWAT THAT FLY (CON'T)

The other day, J. R. W. sent in a little poem about building a monument to the guy who first put screens on doors. Comes now the answer:

While "swat the fly's" a worthy cry
I'd rather swat the guy
Who props the screen door open wide
And lets the flies inside.

HERE WE ARE IN DUTCH HARBOR, CATHERINE!
IT'S A STRANGE AND EXCITING PLACE ...I'LL SEND BACK A PIGEON, SO FATHER WILL KNOW WE'VE LANDED SAFELY!
I THINK BRINGING THOSE CARRIER PIGEONS ALONG WAS A SPLENDID IDEA, CATHERINE...THEY MIGHT SERVE US WELL IF OUR WIRELESS SHOULD HAPPEN TO FAIL!
FATHER LOVES THEM...HE'S RAISED THEM FOR YEARS, AND THIS IS A WONDERFUL CHANCE TO TEST THEIR HOMING ABILITY!
I'VE BEEN NOSING AROUND HERE A WEEK, NOW, LANE...A GUY NAMED DRURY WAS SUPPOSED TO HIRE KING'S CREW.... BUT HE'S BEEN HITTING THE BOTTLE AND...

Wood's Role in Red Probe Cited

By Drew Pearson

The more you look into the operations of Congressman John S. Wood of Georgia, the more it appears that he merits as much investigation as the witnesses appearing before his Un-American Activities Committee.

PEARSON

Not only did the Congressman take a $1000 fee from a crippled boy injured by an Army truck, in return for passing legislation; not only did he put his servant on the Government pay roll at $50 a week while that servant actually worked most of the time in Wood's home; but in addition it appears that Wood connived to postpone the investigation of Communist activities in Hollywood.

When Wood became chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee in July, 1945, one of the first jobs on the calendar was to probe reports that various key writers for the film industry were Communists. Congressman Dies of the old Dies Committee had collected various information on this, and Wood even sent an investigator to Hollywood.

But, for some mysterious reason, the probe never came off while Wood was chairman of the committee. Why is the big question.

The answer can be traced to Louis B. Mayer of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and to an obscure Georgia lawyer, Edgar Dunlap, in Congressman Wood's home district, to whom Mayer paid a whopping big fee.

That any of this fee was passed on to the Congressman is vigorously denied, just as Wood proclaims to high heaven that he knew nothing about the $1000 fee which his office secretary, Carl Tallant, collected from the boy who was hit by an Army truck.

MGM Goes to Georgia

It is interesting to note, however, that Dunlap wrote to Mayer during the course of the Hollywood probe, reporting that everything had been taken care of with his Congressman. It is also significant that Louis B. Mayer had slews of high-priced lawyers in Washington whom he could call on, and did not need to reach down into Georgia to hire a hitherto unknown friend of Chairman Wood. Among Washington counsel for the motion picture industry are James Byrnes, former Secretary of State; Paul McNutt, former Governor of Indiana and High Commissioner to the Philippines; while Erie Johnston, chief representative of the industry, knows his way around in Washington better than almost anyone else.

In addition, Mayer's personal Washington attorneys included astute Alfons Landa, partner of former Ambassador Joe Davies; and Ellsworth Alvord, a great friend of Senator George of Georgia. Ignoring these, however, Louis B. Mayer selected an unknown attorney in the home district of the chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee to handle the Hollywood probe.

Mayer's judgment was good. For Dunlap's friend, Congressman Wood, puttered around with his much-ballyhooed probe, but he never did hold it. Louis J. Russell went to Hollywood for the committee in 1945, and collected important information about Communist film writers. This was supplemented by two former FBI agents, H. A. Smith and A. B. Leckie.

But Congressman Wood, then chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee, did nothing with this material. He waited a year and a half, until December, 1946, by which time the Democrats had been defeated and the Republicans were within 30 days of taking over. Then he went to Hollywood, was wined and dined, and given the usual treatment. But that was all. He made no investigation.

And it was not until Wood stepped down as chairman during the Eightieth Congress, and the Republicans took over, that the Hollywood probe began. It was under the Republicans that various screen writers and producers were summoned to Washington.

Dunlap's Admissions

Edgar Dunlap, the Gainesville, Ga., attorney whom Louis B. Mayer selected to represent him, is a big, bluff, prosperous-looking gentleman who, when interviewed, at first denied that he knew Mayer, except to say that he had met him casually on the MGM movie lot in Hollywood in 1946.

Questioned further, Dunlap admitted that he had known Mayer earlier, having met him through Carter Barron, the Georgia gentleman who represents Mayer in Washington and who is an intimate friend of Congressman Wood.

At first, Dunlap denied he had ever written to Mayer "except maybe a Christmas card." Later, he admitted that he had written to Mayer and reported that he had arranged with Congressman Wood to let Mayer testify before the Un-American Activities Committee on a certain date so he would not be kept waiting in Washington.

After Dunlap's memory was revived, he finally admitted that he had received a fee from Mayer. The fee is reported to have been $25,000, though Dunlap refused to say how much it was.

He also claimed the fee was paid him for expediting a shipment of Mayer's horses in Chicago during the war when there was a tangle over an ICC regulation.

"Well, how is it," Dunlap was asked, "that Louis B. Mayer, with a battery of high-priced lawyers, some of them in Chicago and some in Washington, goes down to Georgia to get you to arrange for the shipment of his horses?"

This seemed to stump Mr. Dunlap. He had no explanation except to say that he had met Mayer through Carter Barron in Washington and they had become great friends. This, of course, was in contradiction to Dunlap's earlier statement that he knew Mayer only casually.
